LATEST EDITION

CAUGHT IN BELFAST

A Blood-Stained Man, Supposed to Be the Whitechapel Murderer, Arrested.

The Government Representatives Withdraw From the "Times"-Parnell Case.

Startling Developments in the "Thunderer's" Cause Against Parnell and the Irish Party—Dr. Mackenzie's Book—The Distinguished Physician Angered at the Publication of Extracts From His Work—Emperor William in Rome—The Visit to the Vatican—Alleged Mismanagement of the English Admiralty—Minister Chapleau's Warlike Speech—Foreign News.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, October 12.—Much importance is attached to the arrest at Belfast of a blood-stained man with a razor and knives in his possession on suspicion of his being the Whitechapel murderer. It was known beforehand that the man who had been writing mysterious letters to the editors of newspapers was actually in Belfast. On October 9 he wrote from London to the editor of a Welsh newspaper; two days afterward he wrote to a Belfast editor, the envelope bearing the Belfast postmark, evidently by the same person, the handwriting being the same and the paper daubed over with red ink to imitate blood, exactly as in specimens I have inspected. Since the evidence at the inquest yesterday about the handwriting on the wall, the identity of the murderer with the writer of these letters is generally believed.

MISMANAGEMENT OF THE ADMIRALTY.

Lord Charles Beresford continues the agitation against the management of the admiralty. He says the public should insist on the work of the Commission of Inquiry, which has been granted, being real and actual and not a mere concession in order to avoid the real issue, and to quiet the people's attention for a time so as to continue the old sleepy state of things existing at present. He declares himself disappointed with the committee of Admirals appointed by the admiralty to report on the result of the recent costly maneuvers.

BALDWIN'S LICENSE.

The Middlesex magistrates yesterday decided to renew the license of Alexandria Palace, after hearing Baldwin's account of his parachute feat, which he declares to be less dangerous than alighting in a balloon. He said the statements to the contrary in the Palace advertisements were merely intended to attract sight-seers.

MANSFIELD AS PRINCE KARL.

Mr. Mansfield appears for the first time as Prince Karl next Friday, when he promises the proceeds of the performance to the Bishop of London fund for the relief of the poor of East London.

STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS.

Withdrawal of the Government Representatives From the "Times" Case.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, October 12.—There were startling developments last night, disastrous to the cause of the Times against Mr. Parnell and the Irish party. In the first place it is definitely ascertained that neither Sir Richard Webster nor Sir Henry James will, as was expected, appear in court to bolster up the case of the Times. In brief, the two men, one of whom is Her Majesty's Attorney-General and the leading Tory lawyer, and the other the leading Unionist lawyer who read out the so-called Parnell letters, formulated the charges of the Times, received its brief and opened out the lines of its defense, have deserted their clients. The leadership of the Times case will be intrusted to Mr. J. P. Murphy, who will have Mr. Graham as his junior.

The simultaneous withdrawal of both of the Government's representatives and of the leading legal adviser of the Unionist party, apparently reflects the opinion of Lord Salisbury and of Lord Hartington, that the case for the Times is doomed.

NO CASE.

A detective who has just returned from America and who has for years been devoting his whole time to hunting up the records of the alleged dynamiters, assured a reporter yesterday that the Times had no prospect of proving its case so far as he could see.

MR. MALLON'S RETIREMENT.

A reporter met Mr. John Mallon, the Chief Superintendent of the Dublin police, here yesterday. He has been in continual service for over thirty years, and knows more about the Fenian organizations since 1867 than any other man living. It was through Mr. Mallon's efforts that the Phoenix Park murderers were captured and executed. Mr. Mallon said that he had made up his mind to retire from the police service, and the formal announcement of his intention will be made in Ireland soon. Mr. Mallon has been summoned as a witness before the Parnell commission, and is expected to give sensational evidence. He is now arranging to publish a book of memoirs in London, giving a good deal of inside information about the Fenian movement in Ireland.

England.

DR. MACKENZIE'S BOOK.

LONDON, October 12.—Dr. Mackenzie, in his book on the case of the late Emperor Frederick, states that after the Emperor's death an attempt was made to entrap him into a false position, and it was therefore settled that no post-mortem examination should be made. Dr. Mackenzie was urged to write his opinion as to the nature of the disease, doubtless in the hope that, thinking himself safe from exposure, he would answer ambiguously, but he disconcerted his enemies by declaring the disease cancer of the larynx. He contends that the operation of thyrotomy in cases of cancer is of a deadly character, the mortality amounting to 91 per cent. He also contends that in a majority of cases it is inadequate for a complete removal of the growth, the average recurrences amounting to almost 91 per cent. The voice is destroyed or modified in 77.77 per cent of the whole number of cases.

THE GERMAN DOCTORS' TESTIMONY.

Dr. Mackenzie held that in a case of such transcendent importance such an operation would not have been justified without the clearest proof of its necessity, which he declares was not forthcoming until a late period of the Emperor's illness. Dr. Gerhardt's testimony is held by Dr. Mackenzie to be that of a discredited rival, and he dismisses the evidence of Dr. Landgraf on the ground of his lack of skill in the use of the laryngoscope, which was so marked that the Emperor was with difficulty prevented from dismissing him. Dr. Mackenzie similarly objects to Dr. Bramann's evidence, and advances the testimony of experts like Drs. Krause, Wolfenden and Hovell in rebuttal. He condemns Dr. Gerhart's ruthless cauterization for many consecutive days as utterly unexampled, and as likely to irritate the disease, if benign, into a malignant form. Dr. Mackenzie states that in twenty-two cases of thyrotomy for cancer two were successful. In thirty-five cases of partial excision of the larynx one was successful, and of 131 cases of total extirpation eight were successful.

DR. MACKENZIE ANGRY.

Dr. Mackenzie admits that the published forecast of the contents of his book is accurate, and says he is not aware how the matter was disclosed. He is much angered at the publication.

CHARGED WITH PERJURY.

Daniel Goulding, formerly a warden in Tullamore Jail, was arrested to-day, charged with having committed perjury at the inquest into the death of Mr. John Mandeville. Goulding deposed at the inquest that Mr. Mandeville had been ill-treated by himself and the other wardens under orders of the Governor of the jail. Goulding was admitted to bail.

THE RACES.

This was the fifth day of the Newmarket second October meeting. The race for the eleventh great Challenge Stakes was won by Lord Calthorpe's 3-year-old bay filly, Sandal.

Ireland.

AN EDITOR IN TROUBLE.

DUBLIN, October 12.—Mr. Dunleavy, a Nationalist, editor of the Clare Independent, was arrested to-day on a charge of stealing a watch. The prisoner was held for trial at the Limerick sessions.

When Mr. Dunleavy was first arraigned, the charge against him was dismissed. The police thereupon declared that they expected to secure further evidence against the prisoner. The magistrates then reversed their decision, dismissing the charge and remanded Mr. Dunleavy on his own bail to appear at the next session of the court.

Italy.

EMPEROR WILLIAM.

ROME, October 12.—Emperor William will visit the Vatican at 1 o'clock this afternoon. He will be received by the Pope in the Throne Hall and his reception will be marked by the most imposing ceremonies. The visit of the Emperor to the Pope does not meet with favor in Nationalist circles in Rome. Sig. Crispi, the Italian Prime Minister, has telegraphed to Prince Bismarck the details of the enthusiastic reception accorded Emperor William upon his arrival in Rome yesterday. Prince Bismarck, in reply, thanked the Italian people for the friendship manifested toward the German Emperor and reaffirmed his own personal friendship for Sig. Crispi.

PRESS COMMENTS.

The Opinion says it does not regret the visit of Emperor William to the Vatican, as it will prove the sincerity with which Italy has adhered to the promises of Victor Emmanuel, that the Pope should receive King Humbert's guests with sovereign pomp as the religious head, in virtue of the law of guarantees. The newspaper, The Italian Army, extends a warm greeting to the Emperor on behalf of the army.

WILLIAM CALLS AT THE VATICAN.

Early this morning Emperor William, accompanied by Gen. Driquet, Commander of the Eighth Italian Army Corps, visited Camp Centocelle, where a military review will be held to-morrow. He returned to the Quirinal, where he received King Humbert. The Emperor took luncheon with Herr Von Schloezer, the Prussian representative to the Vatican, after which he proceeded to the Vatican to visit the Pope. He wore the uniform of the Life Guards and was attended by Count Herbert Bismarck. Enormous crowds lined the streets leading to the Vatican, and were very enthusiastic in their manifestations in honor of the Emperor. The proposed displays in the Vatican district were abandoned.

REVIEW OF TROOPS AT TIFLIS.

ST. PETERSBURG, October 12.—The Russian Imperial party to-day reviewed the troops at Tiflis and subsequently laid the foundation stone of the Girls' Institute Building. The Georgian nobles will give their majesties a banquet this evening, to be followed by a ball.

Africa.

THE SLAVES.

ZANZIBAR, October 12.—A French cruiser has arrived here for the purpose of preventing the use of the French flag by slavers as a cover to their trade.

The Dominion.

CHAPLEAU'S WARLIKE SPEECH.

MONTREAL, Quebec, October 12.—Minister of State Chapleau made a wild speech here last night at a banquet to Mr. White, the new member for Cardwell and son of the late Minister. He eulogized Blaine and talked war, surprising everybody. He spoke of Canada's coolness under existing circumstances, but most pleased the representative audience by referring to Canadian defenses.

[K]illed by the Fall.

Gus Heusick, a bricklayer employed on the new Liggett & Myer's building on Ninth and Washington avenue, between Tenth and Eleventh street, fell this morning from the fifth floor of the building, where he was working. In his fall he struck a beam, breaking it in half and then falling from there to the basement. When he was picked up by some of his fellow workingmen he was found to be dead. The nature of his injuries will be ascertained at the inquest. He was 40 years of age and lived on Taylor and Easton avenues.

J.-I.-C.'s Daughter Married.

RACINE, Wis., October 12.—Miss Case, youngest daughter of Hon. J. I. Case, was married last evening to Jonathan J. Crooks of San Francisco. The residence of the bride's parents was beautifully decorated for the occasion and was a literal bank of flowers in the interior. Mr. and Mrs. Crooks left in the evening for San Francisco, where they will hereafter reside.

THE MUD RUN DISAS[TER].

BURIAL OF THE VICTIMS TO TAKE PLAC[E] TO-MORROW.

A Small Army of Grave-Diggers at Work—Horrible Death of James Donnelly, a Horseman, at Blue Rapids, Kan.—Burned to Death—Struck by a Switch Engine—Suffocated and Injured.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., October 12.—Careful estimates place the number of killed in the collision at Mud Run at fifty-seven. The injured are greatly in excess of that number. Nearly all are in the hospitals and many are reported in a critical condition. Some excitement was caused by the action of Coroner Horn, who refused to make up a jury for the inquest at the scene of the disaster. He went to Mauch Chunk and secured a jury of seven men. After viewing thirty-seven dead bodies in the three cars, he proceeded to Mauch Chunk, stating before he departed that he would give public notice of the time set for the inquest. A formal protest was made against the Coroner's manner of proceeding. Henry Cook, the engineer of the section which ran into the ill-fated train, was slightly injured. When interviewed by reporters he refused to make any statement. So far as has been ascertained the rules and orders of the company were fully complied with by the train men of the wrecked section and the train dispatchers.

There are no new developments to-day. The town of Pleasant Valley, which furnished no less than thirty-three victims, is a grief-stricken place. All business has been suspended in the mines and elsewhere and universal sorrow prevails. The dead will all be buried to-morrow morning. Preparations for high mass over them are being arranged. The bodies will all be taken to the Roman Catholic Church for this purpose. Many priests from the Luzerne and Lackawanna Diocese will be in attendance to assist in the solemn ceremonies. A small army of grave-diggers are at work to-day preparing for the sepulture of the unfortunates. Peter Kline of Providence, aged 15, another victim of the accident, died at the hospital here this morning.

Dragged to Death.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kan., October 12.—While James Donnelly was riding a stallion on the racecourse for exercise Tuesday the saddle turned and threw him to the ground with his foot fast in the stirrup. This frightened the animal, and he ran away along the inside fence. Donnelly's head commenced to strike the posts, then his body seemed like a ball, bounding along, striking the ground and fence. His head was mashed to a jelly. Just as the bystanders succeeded in stopping the frightened horse the animal's hind foot stepped on the man's head, completely tearing it from the body. Donnelly left a wife who had just become a mother.

Burned to Death.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

MEXICO, Mo., October 12.—The 9-year-old daughter of Harrison Boyd, living in the northwestern suburbs of this city, was burned to death last night. Boyd and his wife were away from home, and the girl was left in care of two small children. It is thought the girl attempted to kindle a fire with kerosene, when her clothing caught fire. The house also caught fire. The father made his appearance in time to save the house and the other two children, but the daughter was dead, literally roasted.

Struck by a Switch Engine.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

GALESBURG, Ill., October 12.—A colored woman was yesterday struck by a C., B. & Q. switch engine and knocked off the track, at a crossing in the vicinity of the stock-yards, while attempting to cross the track, but fortunately was not killed.

Suffocated and Injured.

CHICAGO, Ill., October 12.—Shortly before 1 o'clock this morning fire broke out in the second story of A. T. Wooley's frame building in West Lake street. The firemen found three of the boarders unconscious from having inhaled smoke. The firemen carried the luckless trio out of a second-story window and down a ladder. They soon recovered under medical treatment. Several others had narrow escapes descending the narrow staircase. A fireman fell from a second-story window and was dangerously injured.

Cattle Steamer Sunk.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., October 12.—The Robert B. Carson, a cattle steamer, sank about four miles below this city, last night at 8 o'clock, in thirty feet of water. She had on board fifty head of cattle, four horses and some freight, all of which were lost. The crew all escaped unhurt. The cause of the accident is not clearly understood, as the bottom of the steamer is said to have collapsed all at once, and she sank in about twenty minutes. No time was left to free the cattle that they might swim ashore. The total loss will reach about $10,000.

BLOODY RIOT AT BEVIER.

Thomas Wardell, a Wealthy Operator, Killed by Striking Coal Miners.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

MACON, Mo., October 12.—Thomas Wardell, a wealthy coal mine operator, was killed at Bevier this afternoon by striking miners during a riot. Nearly all of the mine owners have engaged new men and these have been coming in from abroad for several days past. This action of the operators has greatly incensed the strikers who have been very bitter in their expressions against their former employers, especially Wardell. Threats have been made by the strikers against the new men, but there was no violent demonstration until to-day, when some of the scabs were set upon by the strikers and a general battle followed. During the riot Wardell was shot and killed. There is intense excitement at Bevier, and fears are entertained of further bloodshed. The Sheriff and a posse have gone to Bevier.

A Warrant for Manslaughter.

A warrant for manslaughter in the second degree was issued to-day against John Wade, who killed Charles Mason on October 1 by shooting him. Both parties are colored. Mason is a coachman in private families and Wade, who was employed at Shickle, Harrison & Howard's foundry, was too attentive a visitor at his house to please him. On the night of the killing, Mason came home and found Wade with the woman who lived with him as his wife. Trouble followed in which Mason was shot and killed by Wade. The so-called Mrs. Mason and others testified at the Coroner's jury that Mason first attacked Wade and that the shooting was justifiable.

The Bell Punch's Joy.

CHICAGO, Ill., October 12.—The Executive Committee of the West Side strikers has issued a card to the police, deprecating the use of violence and commanding all of the strikers to avoid al disturbances. The first two cars sent out during the day in the West Division left the Western avenue barns late yesterday afternoon, and met with many obstacles on the trip. Some stones were flung and the mob collected along the line looked ugly, but the police managed to keep the crowd in check. Julius Raselberg, a former conductor, was locked up, having been seen strewing along the car tracks black objects about the size of walnuts and variously said to be cartridges and torpedoes. Three torpedoes were exploded last night at Fremont street, on the route of the Garfield avenue cars. There was much excitement, but no one hurt. Employes of the eastern roads of the syndicate are expected to strike to-morrow morning.

PREPARING TO START CARS.

8:45 a. m.—About twenty-five men have been held in reserve all night at the Western avenue barns, ready to run out cars at the shortest notice. The barn foreman said he expected to receive orders to get out a dozen cars some time this morning, and that he would be ready on ten minutes' notice. Ten policemen have been stationed in the barn all night. An extra squad has also been waiting at the West Madison Street Station, a rumor having been spread that a mob of strikers might attack the barns to get at the men. It is understood that an attempt will be made to run cars on one or two other West Side lines to-day. The usual number of cars were started on the North Side this morning, meeting with no opposition. The alleged dynamite find on a North Side track proves to have been of absolutely no consequence. The torpedoes were of the small, cheap variety and altogether harmless.

C. T. Yerkes

A BIG EFFORT TO BE MADE.

10:30 a. m.—Orders have been issued for the concentration of 150 policemen at the Desplaines Street station and the supposition is that an attempt will be made to get out a larger number of West Side cars than have been run at any previous time since the strike was inaugurated. The few strikers gathered around the barns this morning declared that cars would not be allowed to run. The North Side cars made their trips this morning without serious interference. The track obstructions were few and the populace appeared to have grown weary of shouting "rats" and scabs at the new men. Chief Hubbard says that cars will soon be started from the Western avenue barns. Two hundred and fifty policemen have been distributed along the line on West Madison street to preserve order.

Mayor Roche.

NO TROUBLE.

11 a. m.—At 10 o'clock three cars were run out of the barns at Western avenue, under the protection of a strong force of police, and have reached the business center of the city without encountering serious trouble. It is announced that about forty cars will be run during the day.

KALESBERGER'S BOMBS.

Capt. Schaack, of the North Side Police, discovered this morning that the dynamite which Jules Kalesberger was caught placing on the street car tracks on Sedgwick street, yesterday afternoon is the most violent explosive ever found by the police in this city. The Captain and Edward Furthmann, the attorney for the street car company, both of whom are experts on explosives, carefully examined the stuff at the East Chicago avenue station this morning. Several pieces of it were found on the tracks. They are cone-shaped, about the size and shape of a half egg. Capt. Schaack says the explosion of one of these cones would shatter a car wheel into smithereens, and that three of them, and that is the way they were placed on the tracks, would blow a street car so high that a fire shovel would hold the largest fragment. If three of them were placed in a gaspipe they would make a bomb precisely like those made by Louis Lingg, the Anarchist.

A DOZEN OF THESE CONES

were found in Kalesberger's pockets. On the surface of each cone is a small indentation, through which protrudes something which looks like a torpedo. Pieces of wire about two inches in length extend from the bottoms, and by means of these the bombs were fastened to the rail so that the flat surface would be on top of the rail. Kalesburger has not been booked, but was closeted this morning with Furthmann and Capt. Schaack in the latter's private office. The Captain is trying the pumping process, but apparently with poor success thus far.

NOT DANGEROUS BOMBS.

Chief of Police Hubbard says that a more careful investigation of the supposed dynamite bombs show that they contain plaster of paris instead of an explosive, and are consequently harmless. They are made in exact imitation of the dynamite bombs used by the Anarchists here, and were evidently put on the tracks to terrorize the car drivers.

Chief of Police Hubbard now says that the cartridges were dynamite bombs of a very dangerous character.

PROSPECT OF A SETTLEMENT.

A committee of citizens waited upon the Mayor this morning and then went to see the Executive board of the West Side Conductors and Drivers' Association with a view to settling the strike. They returned to the Mayor's office shortly before 1 o'clock. They reported that after laboring with the executive boards of both the North and West sides, the men had agreed to allow the company, in case of a settlement, to retain in their employ all the new men employed since the strike began. This is a decided concession. The committee further announced that both executive boards would come to the Mayor's office this afternoon, where Mr. Yerkes has been invited to meet them.

The New York Lines.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, October 12.—Unless the strike of the street car employes in Chicago is soon settled the probability is that three lines in this city will be tied up. Master Workman James H. Magee of National District No. 226, the jurisdiction of which covers railroad men in a number of cities, including Chicago, said to a reporter last night: "The lines in Chicago on which the trouble exists are owned by a Philadelphia syndicate, of which Mr. Yerkes, Mr. Wiedner and Mr. Stephen B. Elkins are the head. The syndicate owns lines in Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and New York. Those in this city are known as the Broadway, Chambers and Madison street and the Houston street and Avenue C lines. The representative of the syndicate in this city is Mr. Henry Thompson, President of the Broadway line. The syndicate has not the reputation of treating its men any the best. I understand that scabs are being sent from this city, Philadelphia and Pittsburg to take the places of the men out on strike in Chicago. Now, this must be stopped, or we will have to take the same steps to crush the syndicate that the syndicate is taking to crush us. If the trouble is not settled very soon the chances are that all the lines in the different cities owned by the syndicate will be tied up. I think that will prevent the sending of men to Chicago.

"Mr. O'Connell of the district executive board and myself leave for Philadelphia to-night to consult with our men there, and from there we will proceed to Pittsburg. That is all I can tell you of our plans, but you may expect to hear from us unless the Chicago strike is speedily settled."

Pittsburg Gripmen to Strike.

PITTSBURG, Pa., October 12.—A movement is being discussed among leading Knights of Labor here that may result in the gripmen in this city going out on a strike. A number of telegrams are known to have been received from the Chicago strikers, one of them coming from Master Workman Schilling, who is expected here to-day for the purpose, it is rumored, of ordering out the gripmen employed by the syndicate controlling the cable lines in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburg. From here, it is stated, he will go to Philadelphia, probably to-night. A prominent Knight of Labor stated this afternoon that Schilling was expected and that he had asked some of the Knight of Labor people to hold a conference with him as soon as he arrived. It is known that the gripmen here are in sympathy with the strikers. They claim to have grievances also, and several conferences have been held with Master Workman Doyle of Pittsburg District, but the drift of them has been kept very quiet.

The Mining Craft.

PITTSBURG, Pa., October 12.—Master Workman Lewis of National District Assembly 135, Knights of Labor, composed of coal miners, has called a special meeting to be held in Columbus, O., on December 4, to devise some method of more effectually unititing and solidifying the mining craft and to take such action as may be necessary preparatory to meeting in joint convention with the National Federation of Miners and Mine Laborers on the following day.

REAL ESTATE.

Olive Street Property Values—Suburban Purchases—Sales To-Day.

As an indication of the continued upward tendency of Olive street values it was stated by a reliable man to-day that an offer of $1,000 a foot had been made this morning for property west of Twelfth street, and it was by no means certain that the proposition would be accepted. This is nearly three times as much as Olive street property west of Twelfth street has been known to sell for. It has been about four years since the last sale on Olive between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets was recorded, the purchaser at that time being Mr. Ghio, since deceased, who paid $350 a foot for the premises on the north side of the block, immediately west of the alley, where an old small building stands. Since then Olive street has made great improvements. The reconstruction of the street with granite paving all the way out to Grand avenue was the forerunner of the record which the street has made for itself, and the Olive Street Improvement Association seizing upon the opportunity kept the good work moving by preventing the location of objectionable business places upon the street, and inaugurated the substitution of granitoid sidewalks for the old brick footways. While these advantageous changes were going on there was a great deal of talk indulged in about the injury the cable road would be to Olive street business houses, as it was contended that the rushing of the cars to and fro would not only cause vehicles to be kept off the street but that pedestrians also would shun it from fear of being run over. The result, however, has proven the fallacy of all this gossip, for more carriages and people are seen upon Olive street to-day than ever before. Pedestrians seek it from the other streets to avail themselves of an easy walk to and from the business district and it is plain to be seen that Olive street stores are flourishing with patrons as they never did before. A year ago when $1,000 a foot and less than that was being paid for property east of Twelfth, the cry of "fabulous prices" went up, but now it is questionable if a ready purchase could be made in that locality at $1,500 a foot.

There is no boom in these figures, nor even the semblance of a boom. It is a natural result of a very extensive and systematic system of improvements that have changed the whole aspect of the street from a commonplace residence thoroughfare, which it was no more than five years ago, into one of the most fashionable retail streets in the city. The modern business houses that have been built upon it and the eight-story office structures erected there are what the people wanted.

SUBURBAN PURCHASES.

The continual demand for city property at constantly enhancing values is having marked effect in advancing the price of suburban sites in a radius of fifteen miles from the business quarter. A great many small tracts within that limit and some very large bodies of land have been bought up lately at nearly double what the property could have been purchased for three years ago. The large tracts have chiefly been bought up by syndicates for speculation, the idea being to sell the ground in small blocks of about one hundred feet front. Another class of buyers who are taking up this outside property are people who want quite a little tract of land where they can raise fruit and poultry on their home places conveniently accessible by rail to the city, and it would seem from the number of recent transactions in these outlaying lands that the demand for them was on the increase. Lately a great many purchases have been made along the 'Frisco and Missouri Pacific Railways at prices ranging from $230 to $350 an acre. A sale of 27 acres at $230 an acre was made to-day by Arthur Mittelberg. The property he sold was owned by Anderson Reavis. It is located on the Jefferson Barracks road, about three-quarters of a mile from South Webster, on the 'Frisco, Philip A. Fadler being the purchaser at $5,374. Mr. Fadler bought the place intending to improve it for a home. Not long ago Martrom D. Lewis paid $350 an acre for the Hudson E. Bridge tract, just west of this, which he is now having cleared up. Another late purchase was made by Mr. Michel of the Plant Seed Co., who bought a ten-acre tract adjoining that of Mr. Fadler at $230 an acre.

A perpetual lease of the school property, consisting of two two-story tenements, fronting 50 feet, at No. 1400 North Fifteenth street, now renting for $84.50 a month, was sold to-day by C. C. Nicholls for the Missouri Real Estate & Improvement Co., for $8,000 to C. G. Cloud.

BLACKENED HIS RECORD.

A Boston Police Inspector Arrested for Receiving Stolen Property.

BOSTON, Mass., October 12.—Inspector of Police Dennis A. Mountain was last night arrested by Chief Eldridge of the Inspector's force on the charge of having received stolen property knowing the same to be stolen. His arrest was made in connection with two others. Thomas O'Brien, a clerk in the employ of the old Colony Railroad, was arrested for having stolen $350 worth of tickets. It is claimed the tickets were sold to Mountain and Edward A. Noble, who was also arrested. Mountain has always had an excellent record as a police officer. He has been on the force for years and never before had a suspicion of such a thing been laid at his door. Noble is what is known as a fakir. O'Brien has made a full confession, in which he says that he sold to Mountain for $1 each all the tickets he has been able to steal during the past two years.

ST. JACOBS, Ill., October 12.—For years the citizens here have suffered heavy losses at the hands of a band of thieves, and while it was generally believed that a family named Simphouser were the guilty parties it was difficult to prove it until yesterday, when 'Squire Virgin had the parties arrested for stealing all the quinces from his two orchards the night before, and upon instituting a suit found them upon Simphouser's premises. 'Squire Hays, before whom the trial was held fined them $35 and costs.

REPUBLICAN MANAGERS FIX A TICKET FOR TO-MORROW'S CONVENTION.

Hugh J. Brady Nominated in the Thirty-Third Senatorial District This Morning—Democratic Primaries in the Ninth Congressional District—War Declared on Butler in the Nineteenth Ward—Local Politics.

The Republicans are busy to-day electing delegates to the City Convention, which will meet at 10 a. m. to-morrow at Central Turner Hall. Several small conferences have been held during the week and a ticket has already been partially prepared for to-morrow's convention. It is as follows:

For Circuit Judges—Jacob Klein, Jas. Withrow and —.

For Sheriff—John H. Pohlman.

For Circuit Attorney—Ashley C. Clover.

For Assistant Circuit Attorney—Wm. Zachritz.

For Public Administrator—Wm. Scudder.

For Coroner—Dr. John N. Frank.

There is some doubt about the name for the third place on the judicial end of the ticket. Mr. George H. Shields is the choice of one wing of the party. Mr. D. D. Fisher is the choice of the St. Louis Republican Club, in the organization of which he was a leading spirit.

Filley is known to be less friendly to Mr. Fisher than to any of the other men whose names have been suggested, but he is now pretending to hold hands off of the making of the ticket. Besides the support of the St. Louis Club, Mr. Fisher has a strong support among the members of the bar and a personal following that no caucus can afford to offend.

Since the refusal of Chief of Police Huebler to go into the race for Sheriff, Pohlman has decided to be a candidate. If Chief Huebler would take the nomination he could have it without a fight.

The representation of the wards in to-morrow's convention has been fixed as follows: First Ward, 4 delegates; Second Ward, 5; Third Ward, 5; Fourth Ward, 3; Fifth Ward, 6; Sixth Ward, 6; Seventh Ward, 6; Eighth Ward, 4; Ninth Ward, 7; Tenth Ward, 6; Eleventh Ward, 5; Twelfth Ward, 8; Thirteenth Ward, 4; Fourteenth Ward, 3; Fifteenth Ward, 6; Sixteenth Ward, 5; Seventeenth Ward, 5; Eighteenth Ward, 6; Nineteenth Ward, 6; Twentieth Ward, 5; Twenty-first Ward, 5; Twenty-second Ward, 5; Twenty-third Ward, 6; Twenty-fourth Ward, 5; Twenty-fifth Ward, 5; Twenty-sixth Ward, 5; Twenty-seventh Ward, 5; Twenty-eighth Ward, 4.

The convention will be called to order by Mr. John McFall, Chairman of the City Committee. A great deal of the wrangling which characterized the Democratic Convention will be avoided, because the City Committee has already been elected, and will not figure in to-morrow's convocation of Republicans.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

Hugh J. Brady Nominated in the Thirty-third Senatorial District This Morning.

The Democratic Senatorial Convention for the Thirty-third District was called to order at 10:30 by Central Committeeman J. B. O'Meara of the Sixteenth Ward, at Teutonia Hall, Twenty-second and Montgomery streets. For temporary officers the following were selected: William Cullinane, Chairman; Thos. E. Barrett, Secretary.

On motion of Mr. Howard of the Fourteenth Ward the roll of wards was called and each ward selected a member for the Committee on Permanent Organization and Credentials.

The temporary organization was made permanent. The Committee on Credentials reported no contest.

The wards were called for nomination. E. D. Pococke of the Tenth Ward nominated T. E. Mulvihill.

Jas. M. Sullivan, member of the House of Delegates from the Fourteenth Ward, nominated Hugh J. Brady.

The roll of wards was called for a ballot, which resulted as follows:

WARDS.	Mulvihill.	Brady.
Tenth	7	..
Twelfth	..	5
Fourteenth	..	7
Sixteenth	..	4
Eighteenth	..	1
Twenty-second	..	2
Twenty-fourth	3	3
Total	10	22

Hugh Brady having received the majority of votes cast was declared the nominee and on motion of Mr. Logan of the Twelfth Ward, it was made unanimous

The convention then adjourned sine die.

THE COMBINE CARRIED THE DAY,

And Executed the Plans Exposed in the "Post-Dispatch."

The nomination of the City Democratic ticket was completed last evening, as announced in the POST-DISPATCH extra, at 5:30 o'clock. Phil Rohan had a walkover for the nomination for Sheriff. Thos. B. Harvey, candidate for Circuit Attorney, came near breaking the slate but his opponent, A. A. Paxson, who was agreed upon by the combine, secured the place. Thos. M. Knapp had an easy victory over Wm. P. Macklin and Frank R. Tate in the fight for the nomination for Assistant Circuit Attorney.

The nomination of three candidates for Circuit Judges was the interesting feature of the convention. The names of Judge Geo. W. Lubke, Judge Jas. A. Seddon, Wm. C. Marshall, Henry W. Bond, John A. Harrison, E. T. Farish, Thos. J. Rowe, C. B. Stark, Henry L. Edmunds were placed before the convention. The first ballot resulted as follows:

Lubke, 107 votes; Seddon, 129; Marshall, 90; Rowe, 62; Bond, 39; Stark, 10; Edmunds, 28; Harrison, 42; Farish, 5.

The announcement that Messrs. Lubke, Seddon and Marshall having received the necessary eighty-four votes were the nominees shut out the last ray of hope from the opposition to the "combine."

In the organization of the convention it was evident that the "combine" had a working majority, but the friends of the candidates whose names were not put on the slate hoped to beat the combine. Delegate Jas. McCaffrey of the Second Ward who was in the room of the Committee on Credentials and knew that the programme would be carried out regardless of consequences, warned the convention that the slate candidates would be nominated and that protests against the cut and dried proceeding were useless. His prediction was verified by the results of the ballot.

It was now too apparent that the "combine" was running the convention. Coroner Frazer's friends refused to let his name go before the convention, Dr. Wm. J. Langan was nominated against Dr. H. E. Ahlbrandt the "combine" selection, and beaten by a vote of 122 to 42.

Justice McCaffrey, who had by his ironical drawls of "Six votes for A-h-lbrandt" amused the convention, then moved that the nomination of E. C. Tittmann for Public Administrator be made by acclamation. This was done, and the slate ticket as published in the POST-DISPATCH of last Tuesday was duly placed before the people as the choice of the Democracy of St. Louis.

THE NEW MACHINE.

Changes Made in Its Construction by the Ward Powers.

The new Democratic City Committee, as selected by the ward delegations and announced in the City Convention yesterday, is as follows:

WARD.		WARD.
1	Isaac Conran.	15	P. J. McNamara.
2	Harry Keevil.	16	John B. O'Meara.
3	Tom Skidmore.	17	Andrew Boland.
4	Wm. Dolan.	18	Wm. T. Haney.
5	Jos. Bauer.	19	Martin J. Duddy.
6	Dan Murphy.	20	Henry Edmunds.
7	Barney Thurman.	21	John C. Fleming.
8	Peter Stretch.	22	M. F. Taylor.
9	Henry Quellmalz.	23	Tony Steuever.
10	Maurice J. Halloran.	24	M. P. Sullivan.
11	John A. Stansbury.	25	Robert Fox.
12	Joseph Israel.	26	George Gonsollis.
13	Jos. Murphy.	27	James L. Carlisle.
14	John J. Burke.	28	Thad Harris.

The only changes on the old committee are in the Ninth, Eighteenth, Twenty-second and Twenty-third Wards.

The Ninth Ward delegation placed Henry Quellmalz on the committee, vice J. G. Rielling. Jack Stansbury, who was elected by the committee to represent the Eleventh Ward on the death of Supt. Kunz of the Work-house, was elected by his delegation yesterday. Wm. F. Haney was appointed in place of Gus Hilke in the Eighteenth Ward. Martin J. Duddy was elected by Ed Butler to Pat Woodlock's place in the Nineteenth Ward chair.

Mortimer F. Taylor, attorney for the Cable & Western road, replaces Johnson Beggs. Dr. Lutz' man, Anthony Steuver, takes John S. Steffen's place for the Twenty-third Ward. Jury Commissioner Carlisle, who was temporarily elected to represent the Twenty-seventh Ward on the death of Superintendent Thomas Cleary, was yesterday re-elected by his ward to the committee. Mr. Taylor would probably have no objections to the chairmanship of the Central Committee, but if the plans now laid are not disturbed John B. O'Meara will handle the committee gavel.

THEIR WAR-PAINT ON.

Nineteenth Ward Frauds to Be Presented to the Grand-Jury—A Sop Rejected.

Ed Butler has st red up a hornets' nest in the Nineteenth Ward, and the chances are that the nominees of yesterday's convention will be stung before quiet is restored. Butler was in charge of the interests of one of the judicial candidates, according to the understanding of the politicians. He organized the Koetter's Hotel caucus, and it was necessary that he should be able to deliver the Nineteenth Ward delegation to any candidate fixed upon by the caucus after his demands had been allowed. This is why he found it necessary to carry the ward. The first thing to do was to dictate the location of the polls and the selection of judges and clerks. This was done by the Central Committee at Butler's request. The story of how the Clark delegation was treated in the convention was told yesterday. The bolt was unexpected, and last night the politicians set to work to repair the damage. Mr. George A. Castleman visited the Nineteenth Ward as a peacemaker. The Cleveland and Thurman Club, the meeting of which was also attended by a delegation from the Young Men's Democratic Club, was invited to put up the Congressional delegation and to name the Congressional Committeeman. John Clark heard the proposition and flatly rejected it. According to the Woodlock-Clark delegation the Butler men stuffed the boxes. Deputy Recorder Ahearn's testimony goes to show that at his precinct 181 votes were polled, while the count showed that 304 had been entered up by the clerks. These facts were forwarded to-day to the Grand-jury now in session at the Four Courts. As the election was held under the State primary law it is claimed all parties implicated in frauds are answerable under the act.

To-day John Clark was at the City Hall in a very good humor, notwithstanding the deal he received yesterday. "We do not want to name the Congressional Committeeman," said Mr. Clark. "We ain't waiting to be conciliated after a fraup has been perpetrated. If Ed Butler can win in the Nineteenth Ward with no voters except imaginary ones, let him do so. We will never hold a primary in that ward as long as Martin Duddy is in the Central Committee and has the direction of them. If these bogus voters can run the primaries, let them try and run the election. We remained in that convention as long as we could. The proposition was to lay our contest before a committee on credentials on which Butler sat as judge in his own case."

Congressional Committeeman McGrath said: "I think the treatment of the contesting Nineteenth Ward delegation was shameful."

The Democratic majority in the Nineteenth Ward is about 340 when the party is united, but there is every probability now that the Democratic ticket will be extensively scratched in that section of the city in consequence of the action of yesterday's convention.

CONGRESSIONAL PRIMARIES

To Select Delegates to the Ninth District Convention, Which Will Meet To-Morrow.

The delegates elected at the Ninth Congressional District primaries this afternoon will meet to-morrow morning at the rooms of the Hendricks Association to nominate Mr. Geo. A. Castleman. Messrs. R. H. Kern and John Mohan are no longer candidates for the Democratic Congressional nomination. Mr. Castleman has the field to himself. The fight in to-morrow's convention will be over the Congressional Committeeman places. Dr. Frank J. Lutz is chairman of the present committee and has acted very fairly in the squabble over the nominations. If he will be a candidate again he will probably be again selected.

DISTRICT CONVENTIONS.

At Which State Senators and Representatives Will Be Nominated.

To-night conventions will be held at Union Capitol Hall and at the rooms of the Hendricks Association to select Democratic candidates for the State Senate. The delegates elected on Wednesday from the wards in the Twenty-ninth Senatorial District, will meet at the Union Capitol Hall, Ninth and Allen avenue. The delegates from the central wards, comprising the Thirty-first District will assemble at the Hendricks rooms. No swaps were necessary in yesterday's convention and the prizes to be awarded to-night are open for competition. The Representative conventions will be held to-morrow evening. The First District Convention will be held at the Union Capitol Hall, the Second at the Hendricks Association rooms, the Third at Uhrig's Cave and the Fourth at Social Turner Hall.

A RUSH TO REGISTER.

Nearly 80,000 Names Now on the Lists at the City Hall.

From the time the office of the Recorder of Voters opened this morning, there was a steady stream of men going in at the east entrance of the place registering and then passing out through the Chestnut street door. About noontime there was a long line of voters from each window and reaching out through the hallway for a distance of fifty feet. A large proportion of the men in line were armed with naturalization papers just issued at the Four Courts. To-day's registration will exceed any day so far by probably two hundred. Recorder Williams said this morning that the eighty-thousand notch would be reached within a few days at the present rate. At 1 o'clock the crowds became so large that a police officer was telephoned for to keep the lines in order and stop the crowding and pushing for places.

Political Notes.

DOINGS IN THE COURTS.

THE WYMAN-LANCASTER SUIT BEFORE JUDGE THAYER.

Nature of the Case That He Has Taken Under Advisement—An Effort by Chas. H. Wyman & Co. to Test Certain Custom-House Regulations—The Walker Estate—Circuit Court News.

Judge Thayer of the United States Circuit Court has taken under advisement the case of Chas. H. Wyman & Co. against Collector R. D. Lancaster, submitted yesterday, and did not render a decision to-day. The suit, which is an interesting one, is explained by the plaintiffs as the result of an effort made by them to stop the extortionate charges made by carriers of bonded merchandise and collected by them through the machinery of the Custom-house regulations. For many years, they say, the railroads have demanded as freight whatever charges they chose, and as the Collector of Customs allowed the railroad to file a lien for these charges and would not permit a delivery of the goods to the consignee until that lien was paid, the consignee was thus through the operations of the customs service made to pay anything that the carrier chose to demand. It is urged that carriers have not been slow to avail themselves of this privilege, particularly when they have known their charges to be in excess of their contracts. Under the United States statutes when liens have thus been filed, the Collector is authorized to withhold delivery of goods in his possession (even though the duties have been paid) "until proof to his satisfaction is produced that the freight due thereon has been paid or secured to be paid." It would thus appear that the importer has two methods of getting possession, viz.: first, by paying the amount of the lien, or second, by proving to the satisfaction of the Collector that the lien has been abundantly secured. The former involves the payment of the unjust charges, while the latter, although it protects the railroad company, keeps it out of its money until it presents a bill in conformity with its contract with the consignee.

As the representative of many of the largest importers here and elsewhere, having in charge the handling and distribution of their merchandise, the plaintiffs have endeavored to bring about the latter course of procedure. They say that when Mr. Lancaster became Collector of this port, among other things to which his attention was called as being wrong in the conduct of his predecessors was this very matter, and it was not long before an apportunity to exercise his discretion in the premises was given him. The Bridge & Tunnel Co., the plaintiffs declare, had filed a lien on a consignment of several carloads of queensware, demanding satisfaction of their claim, which, it is alleged, was some $300 more than the bill of lading contract. Mr. Lancaster, at the plaintiffs' suggestion, sent for Mr. Bauich, the agent, and informed him that such use of his (Lancaster's) office for the purpose in view would no longer be permitted, and that if the consignee protected him (Bauich) with security for the freight, he (Bauich) must accept such security, that the goods might be delivered to the consignee. Moreover he further notified Mr. Bauich that if he would not accept such security in the nature of a good bond he (Lancaster) would deliver the goods to the consignee anyway. From that day up to the arrival of the tinplates involved in this suit everything went on nicely; the railroad people filed their liens and when they were excessive the plaintiffs satisfied them with a bond and got possession of the merchandise. These tinplates, however, came in over the Chicago & Alton Railroad, some of them on a through bill of lading to St. Louis proper. The carrier, however, gave the firm the usual notice to take possession in East St. Louis, and the firm refused to accept the goods except at the point of destination. The Collector took possession in East St. Louis, brought them via the St. Louis Transfer Co. to the public store on this side—the carrier filing its lien for interest freight and charges. The firm paid the duty and, after making a legal tender of the exact freight to the carrier, tendered a good and sufficient bond to the carrier, as had been its custom. This was the first experience the firm had had in such matters with the Chicago & Alton Railroad and the procedure was new to it, so the firm referred the matter to its attorney. A conference was held between the Railroad Co., the Transfer Co., and the Collector. Mr. R. P. Tansey is not only a director in the Chicago & Alton Railroad Co., but President of the St. Louis Transfer Co., and both of these corporations were interested in these freights and liens. The carrier refused to receive the bond and withdraw its lien, and the Collector refused to take the same course with Mr. Tansey that he had taken previously with Mr. Bauich. The bond having been tendered to the carrier and afterwards to the Collector that he might be satisfied that the carrier was secured, so that under the statute he might see himself free to make a delivery to the importer, it was refused by both and delivery withheld. The firm did all it could to obtain amicable possession, and was forced to bring suit.

The legal points were practically settled last November on a preliminary hearing of the case, and the court ordered the Marshal to give the firm possession. At that time the court laid down specifically the line of procedure in such cases, which was identical with that adopted by the firm. The recent hearing was simply to determine whether the line pursued by the firm was identical with the procedure indicated by the court, and involves only the matter of cost.

The Walker Estate.

John G. Priest, administrator de bonis non of Isaac Walker, deceased, entered suit in the Circuit Court this morning against James A. Deaver, Julia Hewitt, Louisa Shultz and Amos Shultz, her husband, Laura W. Caulfield, Maria T. Parker, wife of Chas. V. Parker, and Chas. V. Parker and Fanny Deaver. The suit is to recover $2,922.89, alleged to have been paid out by plaintiff as administrator of the Walker estate by reason of a certain claim and incumbrance, and as costs incurred in defending the suits brought by Mary L. Tyler against the plaintiff as administrator. It is prayed that the judgment against James A. Deaver, Julia Hewitt, Louisa Shultz and Laura W. Caulfield be made a special lien upon certain property described as being by them severally conveyed to defendant, Fanny Deaver, in proportion to the shares by them respectively conveyed to her, and that the judgment against Maria T. Parker be made a special lien upon her interest in the lot on Main street, just north of Locust.

A PRISONER'S ESCAPE.

He Walks Out of Court in a Very Easy and Graceful Manner.

A prisoner made his escape from the Court of Criminal Correction this morning in an easy, graceful manner which would have done credit to Jack Shepherd. No blame can be attached to the fellow as he merely obeyed the orders of the officer who had him in charge.

John O'Brien, better known as "Monkey" Keefe, who has been a thief from boyhood, was examined before Judge Noonan in the Court of Criminal Correction Wednesday on charge of stealing a gold watch valued at $50, on September 15, from James W. Williams, and he was held for the Grand-jury in $1,000 bond. There was also a case of petit larceny pending against him. In this he was charged with stealing $3 worth of underwear from Emil Lederer. This case came up for trial to-day, and as he had already been bound over in a felony case, Prosecuting Attorney Claiborne continued the petit larceny charge generally. He merely made the announcement without stating his reason, and Sheriff Jirik, who was guarding the prisoner, not knowing that O'Brien was wanted in another case, told him to go. The prisoner did so. Detective Browning met O'Brien walking leisurely along Twelfth street and was surprised, as he knew he had been bound over for the Grand-jury. He inquired at the Four Courts about the matter, and Detective Flynn went up to the Sheriff's office and asked about the matter. This was the first intimation the Sheriff's office had that the fellow was wanted. The Sheriffs and the police are now scouring the city for him.

PRETTY GIRLS WHO RIDE.

FAMOUS HORSEWOMEN AMONG THE CHARMING BELLES OF WASHINGTON.

The Daughter of Secretary Bayard Used to Ride Everywhere—Daring Miss Ethel Chase Sprague—Miss McCulloch and Miss Maury Not Afraid of Anything—Miss Annie Ayer's Narrow Escape.

[Written for the POST-DISPATCH.]

WHILE Historian Bancroft, Librarian Spofford and Secretary Bayard and his daughters were the pioneers of equestrianism in Washington since the opening of the riding academy everybody who is anybody rides, and many ride wonderfully well. It is a sport at which men are supposed to excel, but the girls, when they go in for anything, go in heart and soul, and now they outnumber the men at the meets, ride straighter and better generally, and say less about the "croppers" they get.

Miss Nannie Bayard is still undoubtedly the most thorough horsewoman Washington can boast of, but she has not ridden much of late, and didn't take part in last season's hunts. She is pretty hard on a horse and takes a good deal out of him. The animal she has at present is a fine chestnut that has had a career on the turf.

DARING MISS SPRAGUE.

Miss Ethel Chase Sprague is enthusiastically fond of anything that stands on iron. Her experience in riding dates back to when she was a little tot chasing Shetland ponies about their pasture at her father's home at Narragansett, or mounted on the bare back of one, riding without bridle, at the head of a procession of forty or fifty ponies round the inclosure. She afterwards learned the niceties of the art in France, and is perfectly at home in saddle. She is courageous to recklessness and will follow any "lead," unless she gets impatient and cuts out a line for herself, when following the hounds. Her horse is a large, handsome bay, called Star, with a decidedly unpleasant temper under anyone but Miss Sprague. He has a habit, too, of jumping Irish fashion, that is, springing on top of the jump when going over an earth-bank or a wall, then gathering himself and springing off. She also rides a little roan called Peter, who has good jumping qualities. Unlike most ladies, she can take care of her horse herself, and many a time—sometimes from necessity, but oftener as a labor of love—has she cleaned, fed and saddled him. Then, too, she can mount from the ground without assistance. Living in the suburbs, as she does, she goes everywhere on her horse, and the chief recommendation a place can have for her is that it can be reached on horseback. During the summer she wears a gray habit with tiny lapels turning back from a high collar and four-in-hand scarf, while on her close-cropped dark hair is a derby the color of her habit.

MISSES M'CULLOCH AND MAURY.

A frequent companion of Miss Sprague's is Miss May McCulloch, daughter of ex-Secretary Hugh McCulloch. She is a charming girl, a blonde, with keen hazel eyes and a slender, lissome figure. She is one of the really good riders. Her chestnut mare, Harriet, a 4-year-old, is a good jumper and well able to carry her daring mistress wherever she wants to go. Miss McCulloch has a good seat, light hands, and rarest of all things, understands her horse. She is fond of riding, as indeed, of all athletic sports, in addition to being well read and accomplished.

Miss Alice Maury, daughter of Assistant Attorney-General Maury, is a fine cross-country rider, and the only one of her family who knows or cares anything about horses. She is a beautiful girl of the blonde type, outspoken and sensible. She knows more about horses than many an old horseman, and shrewd indeed must be the dealer who can get the best of her in a horse trade. She visited the racing stables at Ivy City several times last winter, and completely won the hearts of trainers by her keen appreciation of the racers' good points. She has a chestnut mare which Mr. Childs of Philadelphia presented to her before she had ever been ridden. She trained her for herself and can control her almost entirely by voice. She has the lightest hands of any lady I know and is in sympathy with her horse. She always wears a blue habit, derby hat and small veil. She is now abroad with her mother and sister.

TWO GRACEFUL RIDERS.

Another graceful, plucky rider is Miss Annie Ayer. She was born at Buenos Ayres, South America, and is now on her travels with her mother. She rides and drives equally well and thinks the world of her horses, two blacks. She has great presence of mind and any amount of courage. One night last winter she got a very ugly fall going over a hurdle at the riding academy, but she picked herself up in an instant and sprang into the saddle, never letting go the reins. Again, at a paper chase, her horse Baltimore caught his feet in the top rails of a fence and turned a complete somersault. Luckily Miss Ayer fell free of him, and quick as a flash she was up with her horse, in the saddle and going. Congressman French of Connecticut has a daughter who inherits his love of horses. She can play tennis and billiards, too, and is witty and quick at repartee. She is below the medium height, and has a plump figure and a good right arm. She has taken her tumble good naturedly and is very fond of riding. She wears black broadcloth and a silk hat, and every attitude she assumes is chic. While here she rides a half-bred chestnut called Hunter, but she has a pet horse of her own in the wooden-nutmeg State.

Miss Leslie Eustis, who inherited a great part of W. W. Corcoran's estate, is as much at home in the saddle as in an easy chair. She is a pronounced blonde, with a well-rounded figure. She has ridden over the long steeplechase course at Ivy City, water jump and all, and is the heroine of many daring exploits in the saddle. Mr. and Mrs. George Eustis and Mr. William Eustis are accomplished riders and keep good horses.

Senator Hawley's English wife looks well in the saddle, and is at home there. She has a trim figure, and sits very erect. She used to hunt in England, but declares she has lost her nerve and will not attempt leaping here.

Mrs. Hitt, wife of Congressman Hitt of Illinois, is one of the very best riders here, although she modestly denies her superiority. She is a very pretty woman. She keeps fine horses, and has a liking for good dogs.

OTHER DASHING EQUESTRIENNES.

A dashing figure on horseback is the wife of Senator Davis of Minnesota. Tall and perfectly proportioned, a complexion pure red and white, soft, dark hair, and eyes brimming over with life and fun, she would attract attention anywhere; on horseback she is a feast for the eyes. She rides every morning when here, and has explored all the surrounding country. She has no horse of her own here, but frequently rides Senator Plumb's. Original in everything, she has modeled for herself a riding habit. It is of jersey cloth cut princesse, with a sort of a double skirt. She wears high boots, blacked well. They come pretty near being tights. She likes a pacing horse best, but can ride at any gait.

Among the misses who ride Mildred Carlisle takes the lead. She is the sister of Mr. Calderon Carlisle, an eminent lawyer. She is very pretty, has dark hair that curls closely over her head. She is exceedingly graceful, has a very correct seat and can manage perfectly the frisky little cob she rides.

Drive in any direction on a fair day and you will meet ladies on horseback in bevies, in couples and alone. Only the ultra-fashionable ever trouble themselves to take a groom along, and the fair sex so far outnumbers the sterner in the saddle that there are not enough escorts to go round.

Among the ladies who indulge mildly in the sport are the Misses Patten, Miss Virginia Rice, daughter of Congressman Rice of Minnesota; Miss Slidell, Miss Leiter, Miss Craycroft, Miss Rose Bradford, Miss Cox, daughter of Judge Cox; Miss Edmunds and Mrs. Bates.

Secretary Whitney and Mr. Greger of the Russian Legation have done a great deal towards making riding popular. Mr. Whitney delights in good horses and he is sensibly fond of athletics. He is especially anxious for his children to become good riders. They are given good horses and provided with good instructors. While the family was at Grasslands a riding master went out every morning to ride with Mr. Whitney's daughter, Pauline. The lesson was generally a ride through the woods, so that she would learn cross-country riding. Miss Whitney is very girlish in appearance, about 16, and has a face as fair as a summer morning. Her expression is sweet and gentle, and her manner pleasant and easy. Her habit is light gray, with a light derby. Her hair, which is golden brown, she wears in a braid down her back. Mr. Whitney keeps many horses, but his favorite is a splendid half-bred gray, by War Cry, a horse that comes as near being a perfect saddle horse as it is possible to get. He was brought over by a member of a New York riding club to ride at the opening of the school here. Mr. Whitney saw him, appreciated him and now has got him.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

The Senate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 12.—After the transaction of some routine business of no public interest the Senate resumed consideration of the tariff bill and Mr. Chace continued the speech which he had begun yesterday, and which was chiefly directed to a review of the merits and demerits of the two parties in regard to the postal service.

At the close of Mr. Chace's remarks, Mr. Allison, with an assumption of gravity, moved that the tariff bill be now taken up, and feigned surprise on being informed by the presiding officer that that bill was before the Senate.

Mr. Dolph said that there was some anxiety felt on the North Pacific coast in regard to the provisions of the Senate bill as to the tariff on coal, and he asked Mr. Allison if the Senate bill put coal on the free list in any form. Mr. Allison said in reply that he had several inquiries in the same direction. Coal slack or culm of coal was put on the free list, but that was one of the mistakes in the bill, and should have been corrected before the bill was reported. It was the intention of the Finance Committee (at least of the majority) that coal slack or culm should pay a duty as now, or perhaps an increased duty.

Mr. Dolph: "Will the Senator state what that article is?"

Mr. Allison: "It is refuse coal which passes through a half-inch screen, according to the Treasury regulations. But it is difficult to distinguish coal and coal slack, so that the committee proposes to put all coal on the dutiable list, at the rate now provided by law, 75 cents per ton. That is one of the amendments which the committee will propose at the proper time."

The House.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 12.—The already depleted House was still further depleted by the granting the half a dozen leaves of absence, one of them being to Mr. Cheadle of Indiana, who expressed a "desire to visit his constituents."

Mr. Stone of Missouri, presented and the House adopted, the conference report on the bill for the payment of the fourth of July claims.

Mr. Whitthorne of Tennessee, asked unanimous consent to set apart December 12, for the consideration of the bill to organize a naval reserve. Mr. Kilgore of Texas, said that he was under the "painful necessity" of objecting, but he yielded to the persuasive eloquence of Mr. Whitthorne and withdrew his objection, which, however, was immediately renewed by Mr. E. B. Taylor of Ohio.

On motion of Mr. Richardson of Tennessee, joint resolutions were passed for the printing of the first and second annual report of the Commissioner of Labor and the annual report of the Director of the Mint.

Mr. Rice of Minnesota called up the report of the special committee investigating the charges of misconduct on the part of Mr. Stahlnecker of New York, in connection with the new library building. The report, which completely exonerates Mr. Stahlnecker, was adopted without discussion.

Mr. Lanham of Texas said that in view of the notice given by Mr. Taylor that no business should be transacted he would not ask to take up private business, but in lieu thereof he moved that when the House adjourned to-day it be to meet on Monday next. This motion was agreed to. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the private calendar. The pending business was the Senate bill for incorporation of the Maritime Canal Co. of Nicaragua.

Mr. Fuller of Iowa, while subscribing heartily to the idea that the Atlantic and Pacific roads should be connected by canal, pointed out his objections to the pending measure, which he contended was loosely drawn. If it were so amended as to protect the public he would withdraw his opposition to its passage. He offered an amendment providing that the directors, with the approval of a majority of the stockholders, may adopt regulations and by-laws, but no change in the by-laws shall be made except by a majority vote of the stockholders at a special meeting. After considerable debate a vote was taken on the amendment which resulted yeas, 28; nays, 8, and Mr. Turner of Kansas and Mr. Lawler raised the point of no quorum. The committee thereupon rose.

Mr. Hooker of Mississippi then presented the conference report on the bill to retire Gen. Alfred Pleasanton with the rank of major. It was agreed to.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

Cheering News From Jacksonville—New Cases at Other Places.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., October 12.—The reports last night showed only forty-seven new cases and two deaths, R. W. Johnson and Mrs. Maria Register. The regular and steady decrease in the number of deaths speaks for itself, and now nothing further is to be feared from the plague, as it is virtually subdued. In the way of public improvements much is being done, and soon Jacksonville will be in a better condition than it ever has been before. In East Jacksonville, La Villa, Brooklyn and other sections large gangs of men are employed in grading streets, cutting drains and filling up the depressions where stagnant water and fever germs are found to gather. The roads are being fixed and repaired, and several shell drives built out into the suburbs. The weather last night was cold and wet, a heavy rain falling without interruption.

Fever at Green Cove Springs.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 12.—A report of yellow fever at Green Cove Springs, Fla., has been received at the Marine Hospital Bureau. Surgeon Hutton telegraphs from Camp Perry that this morning's report shows the arrival of fifteen refugees and the discharge of thirty-five. There now remain in camp 140 refugees and six in the fever camp.

At Decatur, Ala.

DECATUR, Ala., October 12.—Three new cases in the last twenty-four hours, Mr. Ed Young, Miss Rindy Parker and Martha Westmoreland (colored). One death—Dan Wilkerson (colored).

RAILROAD NEWS.

Gov. Ames and the Atchison Deal—Demoralization of Business.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

BOSTON, Mass., October 12.—Gov. Ames is fairly bubbling over with wrath because he was left out in the cold in the recent Atchison deal. The Governor held considerable Atchison stock for which he paid much higher prices than are now ruling. When the recent scramble of the so-called "insiders" to sell the stock short was made, in anticipation of the reduced dividend, Gov. Ames did not get the tip, and with every successive drop in the price the Governor's rage has increased proportionately. Another large stockholder, who was also left out in the deal, was so mad that he disposed of all his stock and bonds and vowed he would never touch Atchison again.

Demoralization of Railroad Business.

CHICAGO, Ill., October 12.—President Adams of the Union Pacific road, who was in the city last evening on his way east, said to a reporter that he thought the interstate law is greatly responsible for the demoralization in railroad affairs, and experience has shown that it is not based upon sound principles. The inability of roads to make lower rates on traffic between large commercial centers and intermediate local points, he says, has the effect of driving the business away from large points, and the prohibition on pools is leading to a general consolidation of roads. The weaker lines, being unable to compete against strong lines on even terms, will be forced out of existence, and the strong lines will absorb them.

Dodge City & Denver Road.

TOPEKA, Kan., October 12.—A charter has been filed with the Secretary of State for the Dodge City & Denver Railway Co. The corporation proposes to build and operate a line of standard-gauge railway, with a line of telegraph in connection therewith, from Dodge City to Denver. The estimated length of the road is 375 miles; capital stock, $2,000,000.

Declared a Quarterly Dividend.

NEW YORK, October 12.—The directors of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Co., at their meeting to-day, declared the usual quarterly dividend of 1 per cent. The books close October 24, the dividend is payable November 15, and the books open November 16.

ONE MORE ILLUMINATION.

Next Thursday Night to See the Last of the Brilliant Show.

The streets were illuminated last night according to the announcement, but owing to the threatening weather there were very few people on the streets to witness the brilliant show. The lighting of the gas jets began about 6:30 o'clock. As it takes an hour and a half to light all the jets the illumination was not perfect until 7:30. At that time there was considerable wind blowing and a hint of rain in the air. The lights were allowed to burn, however, until nearly 9 o'clock, when the fall of rain compelled the committee to order the gas turned off.

On next Thursday night the last illumination will occur. The committee is keeping the arches and globes up at great risk of serious loss should there be a heavy storm, but they think the attraction should be maintained for the benefit of those persons who are coming to St. Louis on the excursions which the railroads are advertising largely. After the illumination next Thursday night the globes and fixtures will be taken down and stored until next year. They have remained on the street for a longer time this season than ever before.

IT WAS NOT SWILL.

A Curious Case and a Queer Scene Before Judge Cady To-Day.

Henry Schwenka, a dairyman, was tried before a jury in Judge Cady's court to-day on a charge of feeding swill to cows kept for dairy purposes inside the city limits. It was shown that the cows were fed on swill from whisky distilleries, but the defense was that the food was not known as swill, but as distillery food. They showed that Worcester's Dictionary defined swill as a food fed to swine, whereas this distillery food was given cattle and could not be swill. Louis A. Steber, attorney for the defendant, drank some of the stuff to show that it was wholesome and so did a witness. The defense also charged that the St. Louis Dairy Co. was back of the prosecution, and that they wanted to close the small dairies. Schwenka was acquitted by the jury. Two other cases against dairymen charged with the same offense were continued. Three more are on to-morrow's docket.

MISS GARTSIDE'S COMPLAINT.

She Charges Her Brother, Charles Gartside, With Assault and Battery.

This morning Miss Julia Gartside, accompanied by her brother-in-law, Joseph A. Duffy, appeared at the Four Courts to ask for a warrant charging her brother, Charles E. Gartside, President of the Gartside Coal Co., with having committed assault and battery upon her.

The trouble between the principals is not of recent origin, as it seems to have grown out of the attempted settlement of the Gartside estate. Miss Gartside said this is the third occasion upon which her brother Charles has laid violent hands upon her. In this last attack, she says, he slapped her in the face and scratched her hands for no other reason than that she had asked him what the commissioners, Chas. H. Bailey, Leon L. Hull and Julius Pitzman, had done or were doing to effect a settlement of the estate. The young lady was very indignant at the treatment she had received. Her eyes were swollen and red from weeping. Continuing her story, Miss Gartside said she was seated quietly in her chair at home, No. 2931 Morgan street, this morning when her brother attacked her.

MISS GARTSIDE'S STATEMENT.

"I told him he was no man to assault me in that manner," she said, "and that I intended to make him suffer for it. He replied that he didn't care what I did, that my father had provided for me in his will and he had me between his thumb and fingers, and he would do what he pleased with me. Twice before this within the past two years my brother assaulted me, the difficulty on those occasions having been brought about by questions which I asked him about real estate in which I was interested as one of the Gartside heirs. There are six heirs. Four of us live with our mother, and I am the youngest of them all. The estate is valued at about $2,000,000 and I came in for a sixth interest including a sixth interest in the $600,000 capital stock of the Gartside Coal Co. Father provided in his will that each of the heirs should have $1,000 a year until his estate was divided but notwithstanding that my brother, who is made trustee, has not paid me a dollar from the estate. Up to eighteen months ago

MY MOTHER HAS SUPPORTED ME.

I can't understand why my brother should treat me in the manner he does simply because I ask him a civil business question, which I have a right to do, and I do not propose to stand it. I am now contemplating putting him under bond to keep the peace, and the institution of a suit against him for $10,000 damages. I am entitled to know something about the estate, but can't learn a thing from him. He won't even tell me about the standing of the coal company, of which I am one of the stockholders. Not long ago I sent an expert book-keeper to the company's office to examine into the books, but they were withheld from him and I could get no satisfaction whatever."

JEU HAWK'S FAREWELL.

The Reception Tendered Him at the Y. M. C. A. by the Chinese Sunday-School.

The teachers of the Chinese Sunday-school gave a reception Monday evening at the reception parlors in the Y. M. C. A. building, the occasion being the departure of Jeu Hawk, who will leave for China to-night. The entertainment provided was enjoyable. Jeu Han Yee sang, and Jeu Hawk followed with a reading. Miss Annie Dale, one of the teachers, gave a vocal solo. Jeu Hawk was then introduced and gave the address of the evening. He said that he was going home to visit his mother and relatives and that he intended to be faithful in his missionary work among his countrymen. His remarks were well received. At the conclusion of the address Misses Mattie and Lizzie McBurdey sang an appropriate hymn. The superintendent, in a brief address, showed the great interest that had been taken by Christian workers in this Chinese missionary field. The report showed that the school, which had been organized in 1878, with seven scholars and five teachers, had from this small beginning made rapid progress. There is at present eighty-five enrolled, with an average attendance of thirty-five to forty.

At the conclusion of the report the teachers and scholars joined in singing Hymn No. 114, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

A banquet had been prepared by the teachers and the scholars were then invited to sit down and partake of the good things. It was remarked by all present that the capacity which Jeu Hin displayed for chocolate cake, and Jeu Hoey for fruit cake, was only surpassed by that of Jeu Min for bananas. After supper the Chinese Orchestra played several selections from their peculiar and ancient instruments.

This school differs from all others, inasmuch as each scholar requires a separate teacher. There are at present thirty-five instructors. A number of the pupils have been converted to Christianity and two are engaged in Christian work. The school is held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The exercises consist of singing and prayer and reading of the scriptures. After this the scholars are taken in hand and put through their lessons. The Chinese reader used has double columns, one containing the Chinese and the other the English translation. The exercises close with singing. Large charts, with gospel hymns printed on them in the Chinese language, are used. Both teachers and scholars join in the singing, which closes with the doxology in Chinese.

DOXOLOGY.

Jan mae shung dai wai maun fook gun
Jan mae shung dai tin har jung yan
Jan mae shung dai tin shung jung quan
Jan mae shing foo shing tze shing saun.

The doxology is followed by the Lord's prayer, also in Chinese. It is as follows:

NO RING IN HIS.

The Coroner Would Not Allow His Name to Go on the Ticket.

Dr. Samuel N. Frazer, is probably one of the most efficient officers who ever held the position. Certain it is that no man who has held the place for several years has kept the work of the office up so well or has had its records so clear and complete. The affairs of the office are in such a condition that he could turn it over to his successor to-morrow. Dr. Frazer was a candidate for re-election until he learned that a slate had been fixed up by a caucus of ward bosses. Then he positively refused to go on the ticket under any consideration unless the slate was also broken in some of the other offices. He said that there must be at least one of the three slate judges changed, and there must be a change in one other office besides that of the Coroner, or three changes in all before he would consent to accept a nomination at the hands of the convention, even if his friends could secure it. It was not that he objected to the nominees, but to the method by which the ticket was placed in the field. He wanted enough changes in the ticket to knock off from it the stigma of "ring ticket" which would otherwise attach to it. Although assured that the slate could be broken in his name, he refused to permit himself to go before the convention without the other changes were made. This is an evidence of the sincerity of his opinion of the ticket.

"I think the ticket as a whole is strong, so far as the men are concerned, but it is very weak because it is a ring ticket," he remarked. "The nominees for Circuit Judge are three good men, and there are only a couple of weak points about the ticket. When assured that the slate could be broken on my name, and I could secure the nomination, I refused to let my name go before the convention, because I do not think that I or any other man could be elected on a ticket prepared in advance by the ring, as was that one. It will be snowed under in the fall. If they had made one change in the Circuit Judges, a change in another office and then have offered me the nomination for Coroner I should have taken it. In fact, I was prepared to work for the place if these changes were made and I believe from assurances that I received that I could have got it. Those changes would have knocked out the ring feature of the ticket. As they were not made, I did not care to go before the people as a ring nominee and be slaughtered. I would not take a ring nomination under any circumstances as I desire to go out of office with a clean record."

Jottings at the Justices.

Constable Hyde, from Justice Patrick Kane's court, served a number of attachments and replevin papers this morning. Among those served were the following:

An attachment for $43 on S. K. Lemar, sworn out by Harry Sullivan. Lemar keeps a boarding-house, the furniture and fixtures of which the Constable took possession of to satisfy the judgment.

Sidney K. Johnson had the table ware, furniture and fixtures of the restaurant at No. 1127 Washington avenue held under a writ of replevin, while he settled a quarrel over them with his former partner, named Ellis.

A family discussion was the cause for the issuing of replevin papers on a stove, a carpet and a picture in the house of Frederick George, No. 1532 North Second street. Mr. George and his son William fell out and the father forbade his son the house. Young George claimed the carpet, stove and picture and employed the Constable to get them. Mr. George refused to allow them entrance to the house, so a shutter was wrenched off one of the back windows and entrance gained. The carpet was torn up in spite of the old gentleman's remonstrances and the stove and picture hauled out of the window.

The Reporter Goes Free.

Judge Noonan to-day sustained a motion to quash in the case of Wilbur C. Fant, the Globe-Democrat reporter charged with criminal libel. Fant was charged with writing an article which appeared in that paper in which he referred to a man named Hopkins having married his divorced wife's daughter and then spoke of the mixed relationships of the women themselves and their children. A suit for damages has also been brought against the paper. The information was quashed on the ground that even if the article was malicious, there was no libel in the statements made.

The Mossman Abduction Case.

Judge Noonan to-day heard a portion of the testimony in the Ida Mossman case. The testimony heard was taken in both cases, the charge of abduction preferred against her parents for taking her from her husband, and the charge of enticing away a female under age for immoral purposes preferred against the husband, young Tobin. The testimony merely showed that the laws of Illinois did not permit a marriage without a license, even in case of bastardy, and that this couple had been so informed. The remainder of the testimony will be heard Monday.

He was held in $1,000 bond in one and discharged in the others.

He Wanted to Die.

The arm was bandaged and the man's life saved. His wife left him about two years ago, and lately he has been very melancholy, and frequently he has said that he was tired of life. He lives at 1800 South Third street.

The indications for twenty-four hours, commencing at 3 p. m. to-day, for Missouri are: Fair weather; cooler; northerly winds.

THIS is a good year for slate-breaking.

ONLY twenty-five days until the swing of the pivot towards Democracy.

NO GOOD Democrat need fear the consequences of defeating a ring ticket.

YESTERDAY'S convention has the approval of every Democratic bummer in the city.

AS THE result of a hundred years of popular government yesterday's convention was not a success.

THE city of St. Louis has been a municipal orphan all week, the Mayor preferring to travel around through the State taking care of other interests.

YESTERDAY'S convention did the bidding of its masters. It remains to be seen whether the Democratic voters of St. Louis will do the bidding of the convention.

STEVE DORSEY and JAY HUBBELL attended the conference of Boss QUAY and the "fat" manufacturers in New York the other day. And yet this is called a campaign of ideas.

ED BUTLER says that thugs stole his ring on the day of the primaries. He must have had a string tied to it, because it turned up at the convention in as good condition as ever.

YESTERDAY'S convention was not elected at the primaries of Wednesday. It was nominated at the caucus Sunday, and it was delegated only to do the work of the bosses who set it up.

THE Democratic delegates were summoned to the convention yesterday by a cow bell, but the Democratic voters will be led to the polls by a sheep bell and Bell-Wether BUTLER will carry it.

THE Democracy which JEFFERSON initiated was not exactly the same kind of Democracy as that which was embodied in convention yesterday to carry out the programme of bosses and boodlers.

BOSS BUTLER gives a graphic description of the way a mob in the Nineteenth Ward held him up and punched him, but that is nothing to the way he has held up and knocked out the City Democracy.

NO secret caucus slate has been fixed for the Republican Convention to-morrow, but then it is hard for one boss to hold a secret caucus all by himself, and if he does it is rather difficult to report the proceedings.

SENATOR VEST has again explained to the country that his letter to the Vest Club of St. Louis was a private letter. Senator VEST is the only person we know of who hints that Senator VEST has one set of opinions for his private letters and another set for publication.

THE Democratic city ticket was nominated last Sunday and announced in the POST-DISPATCH on Tuesday, but the morning papers did not get on to it until this morning. We expect to be a day ahead of the morning papers, but we do not ordinarily expect to be three days ahead of them.

IT is natural that the heart of the Republic's editor should be broken when he sees the POST-DISPATCH going like hot cakes at 5 cents a copy, while his own paper can hardly be given away. People don't mind paying for a good live newspaper, but a sloppy waste-basket sheet is dear at any price.

CHICAGO is in the midst of a street car strike and the usual reports of riots are received from the city of dynamite and mob law. Chicago has sown the wind of political corruption and lawlessness and is reaping the whirlwind of violence and anarchy. There is a lesson for St. Louis and every other city in the experience of Chicago.

THE prize husband of the land and the happiest married couple in existence have been found by the POST-DISPATCH. The Husband Contest brought them to the front. Their names will appear in the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH, and the happy wife who presides in this beautiful home will receive the $25 prize.

THE spirit of independence in local affairs and of effective revolt against ring caucus nominations and ring-made committee work is growing vigorously among the Democrats of St. Louis. If the local Republican machine develops a similar spirit in that party, this will be a good year for independent candidates and bolters on both sides.

ALL the trouble, cost and fighting at the Democratic primaries were a mere side-show of the "cheap fake" kind. A ring of bosses met in secret caucus and made the ticket, and it was printed in full in the POST-DISPATCH days before the convention met. The ring caucus not only named the ticket but usurped and secured control of the city Democratic organization.

CONFRONTED with the proof that his long primer Sunday waste-basket issue really measures up only half the reading matter of a civilized Sunday paper, the canebrake editor of the Republic answers by saying that there is a good newspaper in Chicago which sells for a cent. If the St. Louis papers were sold for only what they were worth no one would have to pay more than a cent for the newsless Republic.

THE Senate, with a few notable exceptions, notoriously represents the millionaire and monopoly interests of the country. And yet the Republican party wants the people to accept a pretense measure of tax reduction, made up by the Senatorial lords of the Upper House to deceive the voters, in place of the moderate, sensible, fair measure of revenue reduction through tariff reform, presented by the House of Representatives. It is easy to see with whom the Republicans are training this year.

THE overshadowing importance of a great national contest inclines men to give too little attention to the local branches of their party tickets, and therefore the pending contest affords an unusually favorable opportunity for the ward bosses and worst class of trading politicians to get their clutches on the courts of justice and other local levers of power. They are now making the most of their opportunity in St. Louis, but loud expressions of disgust with their work are heard on every hand and foreshadow a wholesome amount of scratching at the polls.

SHERIFF GRANT, the Tammany candidate for Mayor of New York, announces that he is ready to withdraw from the nomination provided the County Democracy nominee, HEWITT, will do the same. He does this because he is anxious for the success of the national ticket and unwilling to do anything to jeopard that by a local fight. This is cruelty to the thick-and-thin shovel-edited organs which have been assuring us all along that a local Democratic fight in New York was the dead sure guarantee of the success of the national ticket.

THE three most frantic screechers for protection to labor in the press of the United States have been the three newspapers most distinguished for bitter warfare against labor unions. The Indianapolis Journal, the New York Tribune and the New York Mail and Express have for many years been "rat" offices, waging relentless war against the Typographical Union. They refused to become union offices, even to save their candidate, BLAINE, from defeat in 1884, and his defeat was largely ascribed to their attitude. This time, however, such political pressure has been brought to bear that the Journal and the Mail and Express have discharged the "rats" who have been working for them for many years, and have become union offices for "political effect." If the Tribune continues to fight it out on the "rat" line the others will probably rejoin it after the election.

HITHERTO the discovery and publication of a caucus slate in advance of the City Convention has prevented the slate from getting through as a whole. The convention has, in such cases, generally been permitted to make some changes, as a salvo to its own dignity and as a soothing concession to voters who do not wear dog-collars and do not like to vote for a dog-collar ticket. But the dark lantern caucus that met at KOETTER'S was composed of brass-mounted bosses whom no exposure could abash, and the publication of their slate in the POST-DISPATCH in advance of the convention was only the precursor of its full ratification without the change of a single name by the convention. That caucus was a little ring of machine politicians, each carrying in his pockets the votes of a certain number of delegates aggregating a majority of the convention. Together they had all the nominations in their game-bag. All they had to do was to agree upon the division and then go through the hideous farce of having them nominated by a convention.

BREAK THE SLATE.

The daring and power of the Democratic bosses and the disgraceful helplessness of the Democratic voters were signally illustrated at the City Convention, held at Union Capital Hall, yesterday.

A slate fixed at a secret caucus of a few political manipulators and bummers was forced unbroken on the formal convention of the Democracy, the delegates to which had been chosen at the regular primaries of the party. And this, too, after the proceedings of the caucus and the ticket agreed upon by the bosses had been published two days before in the POST-DISPATCH. The machinery of the party was used simply as the tool of the most disreputable elements of the party.

It is disgraceful and astounding that TOM WAND, ED BUTLER, JIM CARROLL, JOE ISRAEL, MIKE SULLIVAN, BILLY DOLAN, TOM SKIDMORE, ANDY BLONG, BARNEY THORMAN and several others of their kind should dictate, after fair warning, a solid ticket to the Democracy of St. Louis. It only proves the corruption and power of the machine.

It would be more disgraceful and astounding, however, if these men and their manipulated convention should dictate to the voters at the polls. This would be an act of humble submission to bossism on the part of all Democrats.

It is not a question of the quality of the ticket, but the methods by which it was nominated. It is not the Democratic ticket, but the bosses' ticket, and Democrats should feel free to vote for whom they please. Several of the nominees are worthy of support, but the slate should be broken at the polls. That is the only way to rebuke the bosses and save the party from ruin.

IN A HOLE.

Mr. F. G. NIEDRINGHAUS, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Eighth District, occupies a pecular position.

Mr. NIEDRINGHAUS would naturally support the Republican Senate tariff bill if he should be sent to Congress. This bill specifically increases the tariff on tin plate in order that a few pets of the Republican party may be insured large profits in the manufacture of it. Now tin plate is the chief article Mr. NIEDRINGHAUS uses in his own factory, and if the Republican tariff bill should pass there will be a tin plate monopoly, and probably a tin plate trust, which will force up the price.

In this case Mr. NIEDRINGHAUS will have to pay more for his raw material and will have three choices—to cut down his profits, to cut down the wages of his employes or to increase the price of his wares. Someone must suffer in any event.

It looks very much as if Mr. NIEDRINGHAUS had deliberately put himself and his supporters in a hole.

Cox Gives Evarts Heavy Odds.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Senator Evarts said to Congressman Cox as they met in Broadway: "Well, is it settled what district you are going to represent in Congress next time?"

Cox replied that he was to be renominated in the Ninth District, which is the one from which he was last elected, by the County Democracy instead of Tammany, which organization has hitherto had him within its ranks. But it is likely that Tammany will indorse him too, and that settles the once uncertain question as to which part of the city should be represented by him at Washington. There is a pretty hot controversy in the Ninth, with several powerful claimants, but it has been arranged in Cox's favor.

"I am glad of it," said Evarts, "for you are a good fellow, as Democrats go. But we shall elect Harrison."

"You don't believe that, Senator," responded Cox. "Your heart may feel that way but your head tells you that Cleveland is a surety. What will you bet?"

"I won't bet exactly, but I will agree that if Cleveland is elected I will read in the Congressional Record every speech you make next term in Congress. If Harrison is elected you shall similarly read mine."

"Oh, but that is giving you heavy odds, don't you see?" After the laughter by the hearers Cox added: "But I don't mind, as it is a sure thing for me. Consider it a bargain."

Carnegie's Delight.

From the Chicago Herald.

Andrew Carnegie announces his delight in putting foot on American soil. Yet, for a man who so delights to touch free soil, Mr. Carnegie spends much time abroad. Though he have great patriotism, he is very shy in showing it. In fact, this King hater, friend of Blaine, and indorser of the system which allows him to make $1,500,000 a year of manufacturing profit, has a "shooting farm" of 400 square miles in Scotland, from which the cotters have been evicted—an act in itself the harshest and wickedest proceeding of the new civilization.

Amassing a colossal fortune in one world, this paragon of human liberty has not failed to see the advantage of spending his fortune under another system of oppression. Inveighing against free trade, where he sold his pauper-made product, he has stepped across the ocean to enjoy free trade in the satisfaction of his inordinate personal desires. It would be interesting to know, between the two sides of the broad water, how many of his fellow-creatures the fortune of this canting Scotchman has brought misery upon.

The Iniquitous Trusts.

From the San Francisco Argonaut.

Trusts are formed to control the price of commodities that are necessary to the comfort of the workingman. Farmers laboring under broiling suns are challenged to throw up their hands from the handle of their plows to stand and deliver as the summons of political highwaymen who have "combined" and banded together for their spoliation—Trusts in sugar, oil, lumber, steel, iron, coal, nails, tin, salt, chemicals, grain bags and an hundred other useful articles indispensable to the comfort of workingmen. These conspiracies against labor are protected by an oppressive war tariff. A burdensome tariff, originating in a patriotic crisis which involved the nation's fate—a tax that was wrung from workingmen in time of the nation's peril—is preserved and made to do party service in this period of Republican party danger. There is not a Trust which enhances unnecessarily the cost of clothing, provisions and labor implements that is not a crime. Every movement and act is a felony, and when James G. Blaine and his political co-conspirators undertake, by their alien bosses in California, to drive old Republicans from the party ranks as traitors because they will not aid them to uphold and maintain a high protective tariff for the purpose of robbing laborers and workingmen, they are engaged in a base and cowardly conspiracy against honest men.

ALFRED AUSTIN writes to the London Times that when he first visited the grave of Keats at Rome "all that met the bodily eye to remind one of Keats were his own words: 'Here lies one whose name was writ in water.' When I revisited it, a few years ago, I found a spic-and-span monument erected to Keats, and conspicuously carven on it—credite posteri!—the names of the persons who had subscribed for its construction!"

JUMPING ON THE TICKET.

PROMINENT DEMOCRATS REFUSE TO ACCEPT CAUCUS NOMINEES.

The Work of the City Democratic Convention of Yesterday the Subject of Adverse Comment—Predictions That Many Votes Will Be Lost to the Party—Some Interesting Interviews.

The nominations of the City Democratic Convention yesterday afternoon were not very well received by prominent Democrats in the city to-day. The facts that the nominations were determined by the caucus held in Koetter's Hotel Sunday night, that the caucus was in no sense representative of the party, and that in the convention everything was made to serve the ends of the bosses who sat in the caucus, called forth many expressions of disapproval. The following are some of the expressions on the subject heard by POST-DISPATCH reporters:

FRANK GAIENNIE,

Police Commissioner, was not very anxious to discuss the methods by which the nominations were secured. He thought the ticket was a good one, but when asked if he indorsed the caucus method of making nominations shrugged his shoulders and smiled.

MICHAEL M'ENNIS

said: "The nominations were made by that element of the Democratic party which seems to have control of it. All parties have the same sort of people in them and the Democrats are no worse than the Republicans. But their methods have so disgusted me with local politics that I will not mix in at all. Some day the decent men of the party will get tired of the way the offices are filled, and will take things in their own hands. The day will come when we will have vigilance committees who will make examples of the men who now control the conventions and the elections. They had to resort to vigilance committees in California to protect the decent, order-loving citizens and we will have to do the same here. I think it is coming to that all over the country. There is too much pocket politics everywhere."

SETH W. COBB

said: "I was very sorry to see that the combination prevented the nomination of Henry Bond for Judge of the Circuit Court. I felt sure he would get a much larger vote than he did receive. I don't want to say anything against the man that was nominated, but Mr. Bond is a sound lawyer and worthy of the place."

W. H. MAYO

said: "The ticket would be a strong one if it was not for the bull-dozing way it was put through the convention by the ward bosses who formed the caucus at Koetter's Hotel. That thing will lose the ticket hundreds of votes in the city and may be the means of defeating it altogether. The main body of the party won't submit to having its candidates dictated by a combination of a few bosses. However, I think that you will see that the Republicans will make just as many mistakes to-morrow, and with Pohlman as their candidate for Sheriff, Rohan's election is certain."

H. STIEBEL

said: "The ticket may be a very good one, but the means adopted by the friends of the candidates to secure the nomination are not such as to recommend it to the voters. Then the way in which the Nineteenth Ward delegation was shut out by the combine and Butler's men seated will cost hundreds of votes in the Nineteenth. John Clark is an influential and popular man in that ward and the determination of his friends to knife the nominees means something like defeat for the ticket."

FRANK M. ESTES,

one of the candidates for Circuit Judge, said he would not criticise the ticket nor the method of its selection, but said: "I got out of the race as soon as I heard what the caucus had determined to do. I knew none of the men who were not named on the caucus ticket could hope to win." He remarked afterward while looking at a copy of the "Boodle Ticket" circular which was circulated at the convention hall yesterday, that "A. A. Paxson will not be elected Circuit Attorney." His only reason for his prediction was that "Ashley Clover will be elected."

GEORGE H. THOMSON

of the Goodyear Rubber Co. said: "I always vote the Democratic ticket straight, but I think I will have to do some scratching this time. I don't know about that, though. There are some good men on that ticket, but the way they were nominated was bad."

H. C. CRENELING

said: "It seems to be the impression that the ticket will be knocked out, and I am inclined to the opinion myself. There is nothing serious the matter with the ticket, but it was the manner in which it was put up that excites opposition."

GEO. H. MORGAN,

when asked for his opinion on the nominations made, manifested much reticence. "Of course the ticket could have been improved on in my opinion, but I suppose that no ticket ever was made that could satisfy everyone. Who is this man Rohan, and what has he ever done to entitle him to the nomination for Sheriff? It may be all right, but I don't know whether it is or not. What do I think of the ticket as a whole? Wait until the Republicans nominate, and then I can tell; before that I prefer to say nothing about it."

A. LOEHR

said: "The charges that that man Josephs made the city for the use of his sweeping machines were outrageous enough to justify almost any method of escaping from it, but scarcely could be pleaded as an excuse for having the work half done by hand at a much higher cost, even if by such a measure so fine a statesman as Mr. Rohan could gain a few votes. The Judges are all right, but there are weak spots in the rest of the ticket."

GEORGE J. COMPTON

was in a high state of indignation. "They may be able to cram that ticket down the throat of some Democrats, but not down mine. When the judiciary is chosen by such star-chamber methods as were employed in the caucus, it is time for respectable citizens to take a firmer stand and put down such a parody upon a fair election. The voters should have a chance to express their views at the nominating conventions as well as at the polls, and should not submit to having the office of judge knocked down at auction to the highest bidder at a secret conference. I have nothing to say against the men nominated, all of whom I believe to be gentlemen of ability and character, but the manner in which they were forced upon the party is replete with danger for the future, and I shall, in voting against them, or at least in refraining to vote for them should no acceptable candidates be presented by the Republicans, express my disapprobation not of the nominees, but of the nomination. I suppose we must stand a certain amount of crookedness in other offices, but when the judiciary is invaded by boodle every one should take a firm stand irrespective of party lines. I have heard a number of my Democratic friends express the same opinion, and only regret that their refusal to support the judicial ticket may be regarded as a reflection upon the names upon it, instead of on the system. There is a splendid chance now for a citizens' ticket."

MR. THOMAS B. HARVEY,

who was a candidate for the nomination for Circuit Attorney and who came very near breaking the slate, said: "I have no criticism to make. I'm a Democrat and will vote and work for that ticket. I would prefer not discussing the nominations of the ticket. Among the delegates I didn't have the strength to capture the nomination. The exhibition of feeling in my favor in the audience was very flattering, however. If the audience had a say, I think I would have scored about four votes to my opponent's one. I will now settle down to my work, which I am afraid I have slighted during my canvass, which extended to every ward in the city as was shown by the demonstration in convention hall yesterday."

MR. FRANK R. TATE,

who was in the race for Assistant Circuit Attorney, said: "My sentiments are the same as those of Mr. Harvey. I, too, was treated to a surprise. It has always been the custom to make the Circuit Court nominations first. I expected that the usual order would be followed. Mr. Given Campbell was to have placed my name before the convention. The order was reversed by the Committee on Business for reasons that as a young Democrat I should not be expected to call other than wise. Mr. Campbell could not, of course, name a candidate for such an unimportant office before nominating a man for the circuit bench, and I had to request Mr. Griffin to nominate me. This action was a surprise. As far as my failure to get the nomination I was seeking is concerned that occurred yesterday. There are new matters demanding attention to-day."

MR. J. O'ROURKE,

one of the disappointed "anti-ring" men, is a horse-shoer, located on Ninth street near Clark avenue. In speaking of the ticket to-day he said: "The Nineteenth Ward will stand by us through thick and thin, and its voters propose to fight it out to the last. There are two clubs in the ward, the Young Men's Democratic Club and the Thurman Club. They swing about 600 votes all told, including their own members which number about 375 and the votes of their friends and every name that was nominated on that ticket will be scratched by them with the exception probably of Rohan and Castleman. Next Tuesday night these clubs will hold a joint meeting and if you come there you will hear an iron-clad oath to scratch the ticket with the exception of the men nominated. Castleman came up last night to square the ward and for the sake of peace. He did everything in his power but the only answer he got from Clark was that if Ed Butler proposed to run the city, he could have the Congressional part of the business also, the White House and the United States, and build a fence around it. The ward is determined to have their rights or at least to have as much to say in the fight as they can. Everybody in it has a sore head."

The SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH of last Sunday gave its readers more than 60 per cent more reading matter than was printed in the "Republic" of the same date.

MUST PAY UP.

Young James G. Blaine Sued by a New York Brokerage Firm.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, October 12.—Toler Bros. of No. 7 Exchange Court are suing James G. Blaine, Jr., to recover $249.85 alleged to be due them as brokerage fees. Between January 1 and March 15 of the present year, young Mr. Blaine had speculative dealings with the firm. His transactions represented in the aggregate more than $86,600. They were mostly in oil, but there were some purchases in Delaware, Lackawanna & Western and Northern Pacific stocks. For a time the balance was in young Mr. Blaine's favor, but when it went against him he was unable to respond with the necessary margins, and Toler Bros. lost the sum for which they are now suing. Proceedings were begun against Mr. Blaine in March last, and after several postponements of the case judgment was obtained in the District Court on August 22. Prior to that time young Blaine had paid about $150 in installments. Since then he has paid nothing. Yesterday Lawyer W. P. Tolyer had the judgment docketed, and if the Sheriff is unable to realize on it, young Blaine will be made defendant in supplementary proceedings.

Lawyer Philip Carpenter, who represents James G. Blaine, Jr., says that it is his client's purpose to meet the claim against him when he can, although he has a perfectly good legal defense in the fact that he has not attained his majority. Young Mr. Blaine is at Augusta.

The number of separate telegrams printed in the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH last Sunday exceeded by 22 per cent the number of telegrams printed in the "Sunday Globe-Democrat."

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen Case at Des Moines.

DES MOINES, Io., October 12.—A decision has been rendered in the Ancient Order of United Workmen controversy. The case came from Clinton County, where Henry Bock was a member of Schiller Lodge. After the division in the order in 1882, at which time Schiller Lodge remained with the State organization, Bock and several other members united in organizing a new lodge called Loyal Lodge. The Grand Lodge (National branch) refused to issue to him a new certificate without the surrender of the former one. Bock kept up his dues in both lodges until his death. The State Grand Lodge paid the full amount of the certificate held by his wife, taking up the receipted certificate. Like claim was then made upon the Loyal Grand Lodge, but payment was refused without the surrender of the certificate which the claimant could not produce. Suit being brought, the District Court found for the defendant. The Supreme Court affirms the finding on the ground that Bock had only one contract of insurance, the full amount of which plaintiff has received.

The SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH last Sunday printed 10 per cent more cable, domestic telegraph and local news than the "Globe-Democrat" and about 25 per cent more than the "Republic."

DRUGGED THE NIGHT CLERK.

Burglars Enter and Rob the Post-Office at Houston, Tex.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

HOUSTON, Tex., October 12.—This morning about 2:30 o'clock two men entered the Post-office here, gagged and drugged the night clerk by force and went through several pouches that had just been brought in on through trains from New Orleans and the East and San Antonio and the West. It is not known what amount of money has been stolen and may not be for some time to come. Detectives with a special United States Postal Inspector have the matter in hand and it is believed that they will run to the earth the bold burglars. Alf Roberts, the clerk who was forcibly drugged, has not yet recovered consciousness.

Assaulted by Rowdies.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

CENTRALIA, Ill., October 12.—Last night as Messrs. Stricknen and Deitrich of this city were returning home from the Sandoval rally they were assaulted by some drunken rowdies and their buggy capsized. Stricknen received a severe cut under the ear. Other buggies returning to Centralia were stoned by the same parties. Steps will be taken to effect the arrest of the miscreants.

Millionaire Flood.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., October 12.—Conflicting rumors were in circulation yesterday and last evening regarding the condition of Millionaire James C. Flood. Rumors of his death could be traced to no reliable source. Up to a late hour last night Flood's son here had received no news of his father's death. A private telegram received in the evening stated that he was better.

A Preacher Shot.

ATLANTA, Ga., October 12.—Dr. Alfred Williams (colored) is the pastor of the Antioch Colored Church in Edgewood. Some time ago he formed a co-operative store among his parishioners, with himself as storekeeper. Dissensions soon arose. The store was put into the hands of two receivers. Yesterday morning the preacher was found in the woods with over a hundred buckshot wounds in his body, inflicted by members of his congregation. He will die.

APACHE CAMPAIGNING.

WHY INDIAN RAIDS ARE LESS SUCCESSFUL NOW THAN FORMERLY.

The Apache Wars Finally Ended—The Last Hostile Band Captured—Peculiarities of the Country—A Complete System of Maps Prevents Future Trouble—Mexican and American Renegades as Leaders.

"THE capture of the last remnant of Geronimo's band of Apache raiders," said Maj. Samuel D. Erskine, formerly an officer in the United States Army, "will in all probability put a final end to the Indian troubles that have so long disturbed Arizona, and have had so malign an influence upon the growth of the Territory. There may be a few outrages committed by individuals, but anything like an organized and formidable raid is now scarcely possible. The Apache power is completely broken, and no further trouble to amount to anything need be feared in that part of the country. The reason for this is not, as many are inclined to imagine, because the Apache warriors are less bold and numerous than they formerly were, for the contrary is unquestionably the case. During the last fifteen years the Apaches have not only not decreased, but have actually largely increased in numbers, a most unusual thing with Indian tribes, and to-day they could send out more men capable of bearing arms than at any time during the last decade. The cause of the sense of safety felt by the settlers is that the haunts of the Indians have been thoroughly explored, their hiding places discovered, and most important of all, a complete map of every stream and water-hole furnished to the troops. By depriving the Indians of their exclusive knowledge of the mountains, especially those of the Mogallon Range, in whose fastnesses they for years concealed themselves whenever hard pressed, their best, and indeed their only dangerous means of defense has been taken from them, for, contrary to the general supposition, the Apaches are not, and never were fighters. I have had many years' experience of Indian warfare, and can safely state that no other tribe either lost or took so few lives in fight as the Apaches. Their talent for murder is very excellent, but I cannot remember an instance when they made anything like a real fight against troops or armed frontiersmen, and as mall command could venture anywhere in Arizona, without fear of anything more serious than a few shots from ambuscade, a thing that they could not do against any other warlike tribe. Apaches always ran away before the weakest force, trusting to their speed and their perfect knowledge of the country to secure their safety, and never appealing to arms except when cornered. The situation of the Mogallon Mountains, within reach of all the reservations, and the peculiar distribution of water in that region was what rendered the Apaches so formidable. Nearly all the streams in that country frequently sink; that is suddenly disappear, percolate the loose sandy soil, and reappear in low pools, generally not more than a few feet in diameter. A man might pass within a hundred yards of one of these holes and have no idea that there was water within twenty miles, as indeed with the exception of that particular hole might be the case. The Indians knew where every one of them was to be found, and after making as long a march as their animals could endure would go to the nearest one and there refresh their horses, while the pursuing troops, when their animals would begin to give out would have to betake themselves to the nearest water known to them, generally many miles away, thus giving the Indians a great start. Lack of water, and that alone, caused the frequent failures of the troops in their campaigns against the Apaches. Now, however, a complete survey has been made of the mountains which were the headquarters of Indian raids, and a map has been made, with a copy of which each officer has been furnished. The great means of defense of the Apaches has thus been taken from them; they know it, know that in case of an outbreak their pursuers could follow them anywhere, and you may be sure that they will not give the soldiers a chance of practically testing their knowledge. The Southwestern wars are done for all time, and beyond an occasional theft or murder the settlers need fear nothing, and the mountains, so long terrorized by the Indians, are now open to the cattle-raiser and the prospector.

"I have several times heard surprise expressed," Maj. Erskine went on to say, "that a Mexican was found in command of the band just captured. To an old frontiersman there is nothing surprising in this, as it is a well-known fact that some of the most fearful outrages committed by the Apaches were perpetrated under the command of Mexicans, and even of Americans. The famous Geronimo himself is a half-breed and old Victoria's mother was also half Mexican. In the early days it was a regular practice of the Apaches to carry off all the young boys on whom they could lay their hands, and adopt them into the tribe. Many Mexican women were also carried off, and some of them are to-day living contentedly among the Indians, exhibiting no inclination to return to their own people. The boys in a few years became as wild as their captors, and many well-known chiefs arose from this class. Only a few Americans ever joined the Apaches, but these were the head devils of the lot, being outlaws whose crimes had offended beyond all hope of forgiveness, even the loose frontier morality, and who in revenge for their expulsion waged relentless war with their savage allies against all whites. These men generally obtained great influence over the savages, and were the most dangerous foes to the settlers. But they have gradually been rooted out, the Indians have been deprived of their arms, their haunts are known, and the long strife on the southwestern frontier has finally come to a close."

A Young Hero.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

BOSTON, Mass., October 12.—Eleven-year-old Eben Blaine Stanwood is a nephew of James G. Blaine, and his father, F. M. Stanwood, lives in this city. Master Stanwood has proved himself a hero. The family are occupying a cottage at Manchester-by-the-Sea, and at noon yesterday the room took fire and was blazing savagely when discovered. The family were busy with preparations for their return to Boston and Master Stanwood immediately climbed to the ridge pole above the fire, braced himself against the chimney and called to those below to pass him water in small pails. This was done and the fire subdued inside of half hour.

The reading matter in the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH of last Sunday exceeded the reading matter in the "Republic" of the same date by at least 50 per cent.

A Big Mail Robbery.

BUFFALO, N. Y., October 12.—Over a bushel of partly destroyed letters addressed to business firms of this city were found on the street this morning. They had been rifled of all their contents that could be turned into money. It seems evident that the letters were stolen by some one connected with the Post-office. One New York draft of $250 drawn by Smith's Bank of Perry was found in the middle of the street torn in two pieces. Many of the letters were scorched, showing that the thief had tried to burn them, but was frustrated by the rain storm. The Postmaster and police are making an investigation.

The perpetrator of the post-office thefts here has been arrested. He proved to be a night clerk in the office named John Shields. He was appointed September 1, under the civil service law.

THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH regularly prints a larger number of telegraphic dispatches than any other newspaper in the city.

THE HUSBAND CONTEST.

NEXT SUNDAY'S "POST-DISPATCH" WILL GIVE THE RESULT.

With Pictures of the Best Husband and the Happiest Wife on Earth—Several Interesting Letters Published To-Day—Some Wives Drop Into Verse.

The Husband Contest is over, but all the letters have not been published yet. Wives will be given space in to-morrow's paper and in the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH. The prize will be awarded in the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH, and portraits will be printed of the fortunate husband and wife. Their life has been an unchanging joy, and all the ladies who have been engaged in the contest will be delighted to learn who the fortunate couple are, what they look like and how they live. All these facts will be set forth in the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH of next Sunday.

A Good Wife Makes a Good Husband.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Talk about good husbands, remember, young ladies, it takes a good wife to make a good husband. I think I have the best husband and the happiest man on earth. He has a healthy wife and three healthy children, which speaks for his love and care more than anything on earth. He has only a small salary, but we live and enjoy ourselves better than some worth a million. We have our own home and he is temperate, truthful, faithful, affectionate, loving, trustworthy, reliable, industrious, sociable and honest; every one loves and respects him. He don't bother me about my kitchen affairs, such as building fires and blacking stoves, and I respect him for trusting it to my care. He attends his lodge and political meetings and parades as every man should. He is large, fine-looking, well educated and polite to all ladies and admires all handsome ladies, for which I give him credit. We have been married nine years and never had a quarrel. If I get out of humor sometimes he only laughs. He never goes to any place of amusement without me, and as time passes away he grows more affectionate every day. He spends his money on me and would spend all the surplus, but I won't let him. Let me tell you young ladies it takes a jewel wife to make an angel husband. Mine don't come up to that point. He has no bad habits. He smokes a good cigar sometimes, but is moderate in this. Sometimes we have a game of cards together, but he likes reading the POST-DISPATCH the first thing after supper. Every important person in town he is acquainted with. As his birthday comes on the 12th of October, if he should win I would make him a very nice present. Hoping you all will consider well and may this help you one and all to be wedded to a man you can call a good husband, I am yours, a well-wisher,

MRS. INDEPENDENCE.

East St. Louis, October 10.

John Is a Perennial Prize.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

My married sisters, happy wives,
Describe how happy are their lives,
With husbands perfect, noble, good,
Who always act as husbands should.
But I'm a French wife named Celeste,
And think my John is sure the best.
We've married been for twenty years,
And lived through sorrow and through tears;
Have found in life some desert spots,
But ne'er have wished to change our lots.
Sometimes, tis true, love storms would rise,
But soon would clear the rainy skies.
Perhaps sharp words were sometimes spoke,
But often turned to harmless joke,
And deed forgiven seven times seven,
And home an earthly type of heaven.
He's kind, obliging, blind to faults,
Of which I've many; always halts
Ere passing judgment on my errors,
Which robs rebuke of half its terrors.
And when some money I demand
He always gives with liberal hand
And does not ask for what I'll spend it,
Nor swear that that time sure, shall end it.
'Tis true he's out sometimes at night,
But always home before daylight,
And though sometimes he goes to clubs
I think him still the "best of hubs,"
For when he goes, if I should choose
I go along; I never lose
A pleasant trip when he's around,
And although it may boastful sound,
To prove my life is a success
I get each month a new silk dress!
My husband is a husband true
My marriage I shall never rue
And while through life with John I'll go,
While I may taste the dregs of woe,
Shall deeply drink life's happiness
And love him more and ne'er the less.
Now should I gain the golden prize,
I'll laud the DISPATCH to the skies,
Shall think with kindness of the POST
Until I shall give up the ghost,
But claim a prize for every year
In John, my noble husband dear.

CELESTE.

None Better Than Hers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

As I read the letters of the many moral husbands I will enter mine as one of the best husbands living. I don't doubt in the least but that there are many others as good, but I do say there are none better than mine. He has always since our marriage treated me as his sweetheart, and never failed once to kiss me good-bye, or failed to kiss me on his return home. He is a perfect gentleman, handsome, stylish in his dress, and has never been away at night only on business, and the only fault is, I don't like his place nor does he. If his business calls him out it is always about 11 o'clock. He stays at home until barely time to be at his business promptly, and comes home immediately. He is always surprising me with something nice, and when his business calls him away for a few days he never forgets to bring baby and me something nice. He has never found fault with anything, not even my mother; he says she is a great help to us as we are both young. He loves his baby and finds great comfort in rocking and singing to her while I am busy. He has never forgotten me on my birthday and always reminds me of my wedding day, and we have a long talk over it. My typewriter was a present from him, as I wished one day I had one to help him with his work. Our cottage is handsomely furnished and he is always buying something nice for it. My husband is also religious, but as one lady said of her husband, he is no little tin angel, but is lively and cheerful and always in a good humor. I can't say that we have never quarreled, for we have has several, but it is nice to make up, and he never lets me stay mad long. I am sorry to say I am always the one to get mad. If I were to keep on telling of my dear husband's good qualities there would be no room for the others, so will leave the rest for the young ladies to judge.

A HAPPY WIFE.

Little Rock, Ark., October 19.

Her Opinion of No. 2.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I cannot let this opportunity pass without saying a word in praise of my husband, who is the best to be found in the United States. We have been married two years and have never had a cross word, which is a great deal to say, taking into consideration that I was a widow with six children; and they just adore him; no stranger could tell but what he was their own dear father. "Old, indeed." No, but just let me whisper in your ear, he is not yet 37 years of age; but he is kind, amiable, just, true, generous to a fault, loving and affectionate; in fact, we are the happiest family to be found. He never went out but once without me and then I was too sick to go out. He brings me his money home every month and never asks me what I do with it, trusting to my good judgment. He smokes, and occasionally takes a glass of beer, and he treats me, as he did before marriage, with great respect; in fact, our honeymoon has never set, and to-day I love him better than on the day we were married. He does not believe in living with mothers-in-law; he believes in getting a cage, and then a bird afterward. If I am homesick he will do anything he can. Oh, he makes a splendid nurse; so gentle and patient, with always a smile; never leaves me without a kiss, nor returns without giving me one. I nearly forgot to tell you that he is as handsome as he is good, and 300 words are not one quarter sufficient to tell the good qualities of my adored husband. His price is above rubies.

MRS. BEEN THERE BEFORE.

The Husband of Husbands.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

If I were a marriageable young lady, as the members of the awarding committee are supposed to be, and were well acquainted with the good dispositions, excellent character and ennobling qualities of all husbands whose wives will compete for the POST-DISPATCH prize, I would unquestionably select my own husband as the winner. The only thing that will prevent my convincing the committee of that fact is the need of more space. Three hundred words are wholly insufficient to properly parade any good husband, especially a prize husband. The chief characteristic of my husband is that while he has a high regard and great admiration for all handsome ladies and is fond of their society, he has never, for an instant, forgotten the proper treatment due me on every occasion. He has never "slighted" me by act, word or deed. He is my beau ideal of a husband, because he proves to me in innumerable ways that I am his truest conception of a wife. There are so many little acts of kindness and bits of praise on his part toward me that go to make my cup of happiness run over, which if presented to the committee might seem too trivial for consideration. Any true wife, however, would tell the committee that it is not the pharisaical deeds of husbands that give the most pleasure. The making of fires and giving all the earnings to the wife will do very well when you haven't anybody else to kindle the fire, or if a husband hasn't sufficient sense to properly take care of the funds; but they are small matters when compared with the grander joys of the right kind of a matrimonial alliance. A good-looking, intelligent, polite, neatly appearing husband with the ability to earn a good, honorable living and provide his wife and bright, well-behaved children with a comfortable home and always keep a splendid cook is the happy lot of a contented wife.

MRS. DESERVE-THE-PRIZE.

Louisiana, Mo., October 10.

Her "Best on Earth."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In describing my "Best on Earth," the least important qualities of a good husband shall be mentioned first. He is handsome and a fine specimen of physical perfection. While I try to prevent his doing anything beyond his own work, in our married life of sixteen years, he has found many ways of making me comfortable. He has never allowed me to make fires, handle fuel or grind coffee. He tends children at meals and at night, and helps them to dress in the morning. He has cooked and washed dishes, swept, dusted, rubbed mirrors and run a sewing machine and read aloud while I guided work. He always sews on his own buttons, and even a ripped place if I am busy. He cuts out patterns if the scissors hurt my hand, and "pins up" while I "try on," and he presses all the clothing I make for the boys. Once he deposited me in a chair while he bent over a tub and "rubbed out" some heavy pieces needed for a sudden journey. He divides the money, never goes to amusements without me, and has never said one impatient word; never uses profane or coarse language or chews tobacco; is always polite in our daily intercourse, and affectionate. He never misses the caresses which sweeten the whole day, or fails to observe anniversaries; and he never makes any demands which I cannot with pleasure accede to. Appended is a list of the virtues which make him a good friend as well as a good husband:

Attentive,	Noble,
Benevolent,	Obliging,
Conscientious,	Patient,
Devoted,	Quick-witted,
Earnest,	Reasonable,
Faithful,	Sincere,
Generous,	Thoughtful,
Humane,	Undesigning,
Ingenuous,	Valiant,
Just,	Warm-hearted,
Kind,	Yielding,
Loving,	Zealous,
Magnanimous.

But I've kept the best for the last. He is on good terms with his mother-in-law, and she says he is the best on earth.

H. E. A. B.

Nature Made Him Great; He Made Himself Virtuous.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The true home is the brightest spot, since the Garden of Eden. The word "husband" means a house-band—a band of strength around the home, upholding, protecting and keeping it together. The husband, as the head of the home, stands at the beginning of all the worthiest elements of society. In the household he plants the seeds of religion for the church—of authority for the State. The family is the spring head of the nation, the source of its purest spiritual and civil life. It is plain what manner of man I think my husband is. Even as the sunbeam is composed of millions of minute rays, the housewife is constituted of little tendernesses, kind looks, sweet laughter, gentle words and loving counsels. My husband's sweetest consolations and best rewards of life are found in the loves and delights of home. Beneath his smile lurks no degrading passion; within his heart slumbers no guile. He is not exalted in mortal pride, not elevated in his own views, but honest, moral and good. Always upright, kind and sympathizing; always attached to just principles, and actuated by the same. Nature made him great; he has made himself virtuous. He knows what is right and is firm in doing it. Integrity and justice are to him words of meaning, and he aims to exemplify the virtues they express in his outward life. The delicate thoughtfulness for my welfare, the little attentions so dear to every woman's heart, never cease. The early tender affection never fails. He has cared for me on through fading youthful beauty to the sunset years with a love that makes wrinkles beautiful and infirmities seem precious. Respectfully,

MRS. C. C.

This Husband Is a Man.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have attained much amusement out of your novel idea for learning the virtues of your fellow men. Such a rosy path of existence as some married ladies have trodden is past my comprehension. Now, my husband is a man, a real live and honest-hearted man, who has the virtues and faults willed to all human nature; the former cultivated more than in many cases and the latter guarded with proper care. We board, and in truth my husband does not always smile and eat any or everything put before him, and he does, once in a while, "go down town on business" after dinner, and he does not give me all his salary. My husband is jolly, good-natured, generous to a fault, kind and loving to his family, does not chew, smoke or use profane language and is sober, industrious and honest. We naturally attend all places of amusement, etc., together, as all husbands and wives who are congenial should; and judging from my married friends we have had more pleasure and seen more of life in the past eight years than falls to the lot of many. Eating without grumbling, spending all one's leisure time at home attending cross babies and giving all one's salary to one's wife are not the only traits which constitute a "good husband." Now I have no doubt that should I ask all my husband's salary he would quietly pass over his purse, and I would rather hand it back than have him "think those thoughts he was a thinking." Lastly, had he not a little temper and self-will and at the same time know how to control them, he would not be the good Democrat that he is.

R. S. O.

Cannot Enumerate His Good Qualities.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am surprised that any woman who knows my husband should prefer the claims of hers. Why, sir, take all that the respective claimants have said in behalf of their husbands and it would only make an imperfect preface to the great book in which his good qualities are recorded. I cannot enumerate, as your paper is too small for the details of this prolific subject, but I must say in the twenty years of our wedded bliss I have ever found him as forbearing as Socrates, as contented as Diogenes, as patient as Job, as faithful as Joseph, an honest as a politician just before election and as brave as Julius Cæsar. One of your correspondents says the reason the young ladies of her husband's acquaintance do not marry is because they fear they may not get as good husbands as he is. The reason my husband's young lady friends do not marry is they hope the angels may soon take me to themselves and some one of them may become Lucille No. 2. Then my husband is very considerate. Every evening when old Nox throws his sable mantle over this beautiful world, he sits by me and, taking my hand, recounts the blessings that fill his earthly mug. Only last night he said:

"Lucille, I am the happiest man on earth, with an angel for a wife and daily visits from that neplus ultra of literary excellence, the POST-DISPATCH, the one filling my heart, the other my head. The only regret that I can have is that you cannot last forever and that the POST-DISPATCH is for Cleveland."

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I ask the prize on both principle and interest. Faithfully yours,

LUCILLE.

He Believes in Woman Suffrage.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have read all the letters written to the POST-DISPATCH and I don't think there is one that can beat my hubby. First, he was a good boy to begin with. I knew him when he was small. His father died and he was left to take care of his mother. He was the only child left to her, so when we got married I made up my mind that she would not lose a son but gain a daughter. She was then 70 years old. I loved her at first because she was my husband's mother, and afterward for her own sterling worth, and I know he loves me more and more because I love his mother. He is a temperance man, believes in woman's rights and says that it will be a glorious day, if that day ever dawns, when the women can vote. I can truthfully say that in the five years that we have been married there have never been any cross words between hubby's mother and myself. We go to church every Sunday when well, and hubby goes to lodge every Saturday night, and once a month we go to lodge together. There is only one good hubby in this world and every woman thinks she's got him. We are poor but we are happy as the day is long. If my hubby don't win the prize it's because you don't know him.

A HAPPY OLD MAID.

Caseyville, Ill., October 9.

One of the Good Ones.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I will not say I have the best husband in the world, but surely one of the good ones. He has no bad habits, unless smoking a good cigar is considered so. He does not drink, which I think is a blessing to any woman; has no disagreeable temper, and is kind and affectionate at all times. He is a good provider and idolizes his wife and two interesting children. He spends all his spare time home with us and enjoys our society more than going down town to have a good time with "the boys." We have a nice little cottage comfortably furnished that we can call our own, a phaeton and pony that we all enjoy, and in fact every comfort and pleasure that a moderate income will allow. My dear old mother and his father make their home with us and he has no feelings but those of love in taking care of them. It is a pleasure to him to be able to do so. He is kind and polite to everyone and often say "politeness costs nothing." He is fond of ladies' society, which I do not think is a bad fault, do you, girls? I think good society improves and elevates the most elegant. Now let me tell you, I am well satisfied with my choice. I've had six years to find out his good and bad traits, and I find more good ones than otherwise. I try to be his helpmeet in all things and I think he considers me such. Hoping my letter, though late, will find space in your valuable paper.

LITTLE HOUSEWIFE.

Little Rock, Ark., October 9.

Takes Care of His Mother.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

My husband I believe is as good as the balance. We have been married nearly four years and have had a few spats occasionally which amounted to nothing. He is true and honest, loves his wife and baby and has made a comfortable home for them. He does not smoke cigars, chew tobacco or drink liquor of any kind, never goes out of a night unless it is of a business nature and always asks me to go out with him when it is for pleasure. He never meddles with my kitchen affairs and always attends to business. But one thing of which I am proud is that he supports his mother (father is dead), pays her rent and will not let her want for anything. He says a son must do what he can for his aged father or mother. After he is married, and has a child or children, he can then tell what his parents had done for him when he was young. He thinks a great deal of my mother, brother and sisters, and has never had a quarrel with them; in fact, there is nothing he will not do for them. Not wishing to go beyond my 300 words, I will, therefore, give a chance to another praiser.

REMEMBER YOUR PARENTS WHEN THEY'RE OLD.

Good in Every Sense.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have read with interest the sketches on "Model Husbands," printed in your paper, and decide to enter the contest. I don't propose to begin by saying my husband is perfect, for if he was he would be ready to be transferred. I do say he is good in every sense of the word. He is not only good himself, but tries to help me to be good, too. He never loses sight of my future good, and is constantly doing all he can to add to both my present and future happiness. He is a good son and brother, and consequently a good husband. He is not so sanctimonious that he can't enjoy either a good meal or a good joke; he heartily appreciates both. He never forgets anything relating to business, but he has a splendid memory for forgetting little commissions. I entrust to him and he will carry letters in his pockets until the envelopes are worn ragged before he ever thinks to deliver them. However, as these are his greatest faults I think I can afford to overlook them, and they sink into mere nothingness when compared with his good qualities. He tries to do what is right by everybody, and, in short, is one of the few lovable, unselfish, noble-hearted men that one meets in this world.

Moro, Ill., October 10. MRS. L. R. S.

Her Ducky Darling.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I never saw a better hubby in my life than mine is. He gives me all the money and I can do anything I please with it. He is just the most generous, kind-hearted, loving, sympathetic, honest and most truthful man in this world. This is the honest truth. He never thinks of going out evenings without me. We attend theater and go buggy riding, and he is so attentive and anxious to please baby and me. When I do not have help, he does not think too much of himself to carry in the wood and coal, go to the grocery and butchers, or on any other errand I may wish to send him. He takes baby out and has so much patience with it. He is polite, noble, brave and very charitable and never says a cuss word in my presence. It is my earnest wish that the young lady judges will get a darling like mine; if they do they will be blessed all the days of their life. I am as happy as the day is long, and as proud as I can be of my own Ducky Diamond. Yours truly

MRS. IN LOVE.

NEWS IN THE CHURCHES.

THE RECEPTION TO REV. J. W. FORD AT THE SECOND BAPTIST.

St. Michael's Church Festival—The Coming Session of the Missouri Baptist General Association at Clinton, Mo.—Laying of the Corner Stone of the New First Presbyterian Church To-Morrow.

THE reception to Rev. J. W. Ford, the new pastor of the Second Baptist Church, took place last evening in the church parlors. Nearly the whole congregation and large numbers from other churches of the Baptist denomination were present, and the heartiness of the welcome given the rector must have been exceedingly gratifying to him. The formal address of welcome was made by Hon. Nathan Cole, and the sentiments he expressed were aptly put and voiced the feeling of all in attendance. A musical programme was then rendered. It consisted of solos by Mrs. Riesmeyer and Mrs. Hardy and Messrs. W. M. Porteous and R. J. T. White and a violin solo by Miss Agnes Gray. Mr. Deickinger then read an original poem welcoming Dr. Ford to St. Louis and his new congregation. After the programme had been given all adjourned to the church dining-rooms and sat down to a fine spread.

THE SHORT ELECTRIC LINE.

Mr. Peper Will Have It Ready for a Test About December 1.

Christian Peper, President of the Broadway Street Car Line was seen by a POST-DISPATCH reporter. Said he: "Our road has recognized the fact of the inconvenience caused by the delay in laying granite in the roadway between the roads. The delay was the result of trouble at the quarries where we purchased our granite. That trouble has now passed and granite is now coming in at the rate of a car load daily and the work of laying it between the rails will progress as fast as possible. The idea that we proposed to fill our roadway with macadam is all a mistake. The law makes it necessary to put the roadbed in the same condition with granite as the street, and it is hardly probable that we would put in macadam just for the fun of doing it, knowing that we would have to replace it with granite. The only object was to put the track in condition suitable for traffic until the temporary trouble of getting granite had passed."

On the south end of the road, from Keokuk street down to the Wild Hunters', a large force of men began work a few days ago erecting poles and putting things in shape for the ninety days' trial of the Short electric system. Mr. Peper is paying personal attention to the details daily and expects to be able to give the system a test about December 1. A half-dozen new cars for the system have been built by a firm in this city.

Steel exploded late yesterday afternoon, setting fire to the building and to Fry's shoe store adjoining. The loss is $45,000 with insurance of $17,000. A skull was found in the ruins last night, and this and other indications go to show that a burglar was responsible for the explosion.

W. H. Taylor, colored, has brought suit against Christ Cremer, a farmer of Gabaret Island, for $31.15, due Mr. Taylor as wages. Mr. Cremer's team was attached this morning by Deputy Constable De Jong. The case is in the hands of Justice H. S. Harmon.

A fire broke out in the second-hand furniture store, No. 2006 North Broadway, a few minutes after 2 o'clock this morning, badly damaging the stock and building. The stock belongs to H. Biddeman and is insured for $1,200. The building is owned by J. W. Caw.

About 11 o'clock to-day two colored soldiers named Ben Harris and Calvin C. Burris, belonging to Company D, at Jefferson Barracks, accompanied by a colored woman, went into the grocery and saloon of J. Schmidt, No. 801 Morgan street. Joseph Nehring, a clerk, asked them what they wanted. The colored trio had apparently been drinking and in talking among themselves soon ascertained that none of them had money. The clerk then told them that if they wanted nothing to get out of the store. Burris made an insolent reply, and a few words were exchanged, when one of the negroes started toward Mr. Nehring, who seized a walnut club and dealt Harris a blow on the head, causing a copious flow of blood. Officers Barthold and Coppinger then arrested Nehring and Harris and took them to the station. Harris was sent to the Dispensary and had his head bandaged, but his injuries are not considered dangerous.

AMERICAN FUR TRADE.

CHANGES THAT HAVE ONCE MORE BROUGHT IT TO THE FRONT.

Over $2,500,000 Worth of Furs Exported Yearly—Where Fur Bearing Animals Come From—The Southern Crop—The Rocky Mountains and Plains—Favorite Furs Cause of Increased Export.

AMONG the industries which have made wonderful strides during the last few years may be numbered the fur trade of the United States, which, although not nearly as valuable as it used to be, is still far more important than most people have any idea of," said Charles Ullmann, the New York agent of a large German fur house, to a POST-DISPATCH reporter at the Southern Hotel. "The two great staple furs that used to be bought by the fur dealers—buffalo robes and beaver pelts—have ceased to be of any great value, the buffalo having entirely disappeared, and the beaver having been reduced to insignificant numbers.

CHANGE IN FURS EXPORTED.

"But in spite of this the export of furs from the United States amounts to nearly $2,500,000 a year, not counting the Alaska sealskins, and nearly as many furs are cured in this country. Every large English and German house has some of its most experienced men in this country, and fully 1,000 hunters and trappers are regularly employed by them. While the great expeditions equipped by the fur traders, are a thing of the past, the number of employes is almost as great as it used to be, as a very much larger territory is covered at the present time than when all the pelts came from the Rocky Mountain region. The firm that I represent has men under pay from the Gulf of Mexico to far into the British Possessions, all of whom send what furs they obtain to New York, whence they are shipped abroad. The cause of this wide extension of the business is that a variety of skins, formerly held in slight esteem, have sometimes, because of change of fashion, but principally because of the discovery of better methods of curing and dyeing, become very valuable and are well worth the cost and trouble of procuring.

POLECAT PELTS.

"Chief among these is the despised polecat, I do not mean the skunk, which masquerades under the name of black marten, and which is quite a different animal. Of the cheaper furs none are in more demand in Europe, and they are used for trimming the most fashionable wraps. Fifteen years ago this fur was worth nothing, but now fully $250,000 a year must be paid in Europe for American polecat skins. The cause of this change is the demand that has grown up of late years for unplucked fur. Ten or fifteen years ago no one would buy long-haired furs except such as the fox and sable, a thick, soft fur, being regarded as the only thing fit for use. This shut out the polecat skins, which did not pluck well, but as soon as the unplucked beaver and later the unplucked sealskin came into fashion fur-wearers began to perceive the beauty of the long, jet black fur, tipped with white, and in some places a regular furore arose for this skin for trimming cloaks and muffs, and to-day no skin commands a readier sale. The United States holds a practical monopoly of this trade, and the animals come from all parts of the country, the South being an even better field than the North.

THE MINK AND MUSKRAT.

"The next fur in importance, as far as the Southern States are concerned, is the mink, which is found in nearly all the wooded and cultivated sections and the combined value of whose skins equals, if it does not exceed that of the pole cat. Mink pelts always were valuable, but within the last few years several improvements in tanning, and especially in dyeing these short and not particularly dense furs have raised them greatly in favor. The same thing, though in a lesser degree, has influenced the market for muskrat skins, while even the chipmunk is now considered worthy of export. A very marked tendency in the fur market is to discover means by which the inferior and common furs can be rendered attractive and be so handled as to take the places of the finer furs, of which the supply is fast diminishing. To do this is the work of the chemist and the tanner, and the advances that have been made in the line of rendering stiff, bristly furs soft to the touch, and changing light, staring colors to the subdued, dark shades that have always been so popular, have been wonderful.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN FURS.

"Although other sections of the country have risen to an importance as fur-producing centers, which no one could have believed that they would ever have attained," Mr. Ullmann went on to say, "the high mountain region of the Northwest continues to be the great storehouse of American furs. The beaver, although scarce, has by no means disappeared, especially in the region lying north of the British line. All through the Cœur D'Alene, the Wind River and the Bitter Root Mountains beaver are trapped, and there are certain isolated valleys and canons where they can be found in great plenty. These are known to but a few trappers, who keep the secret closely and carefully preserve the game.

In fact no one in the country is so well acquainted with where game is to be found as the agents of the various fur houses, as it is their business to keep a regular game map of the country, the man who knows best where to send his hunters to obtain furs being of most value to his employers.

SKINS THAT EUROPEANS USE.

"In the far northern region the wolverine is by no means uncommon. Mink, muskrats and polecat skins are plenty, while now and then a black or silver fox, the most eagerly sought fur bearing animals in America, are caught. Of late years a large demand has sprung up for the gray coyote skins, rugs and carriage robes made of them being very fashionable in England. The yellow prairie wolf is well worth shooting, while the skin of the great gray wolf always commands a good price, if taken entire, as it mounts very handsomely. Antelope skins are in little demand, and therefore this animal is undisturbed by the fur hunters. Grizzly bear skins are valuable as curiosities, but are not common enough to form any item worth reckoning on. The hide of the cinnamon bear is in far less demand than that of his black brother, the latter always commanding a good price, although by no means rare. Nowadays nearly everything is fish that comes in our net, as improved methods of treatment have rendered almost any fur marketable, and the exports from the United States have nearly doubled within the last ten years."

HISTORY OF THE COLLAR.

ITS FEEBLE BEGINNING ABOUT SIX HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

A Time When No Collars Were Worn—Doublets With High Neckbands—Francis I. Introduces the Collar in France—Chaucer's Collar—Collars So Large That the Wearers Had to Be Fed With Long Spoons—Evolution of the Dude's High Collar of To-Day.

When no collars were needed; Temp. Rich. II. (From the Harleian MS.)

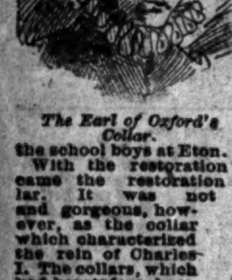

COLLARS, which are now essential articles of the male attire, were not known until about six hundred years ago. Shirts had been worn for years before it was deemed necessary to wear a collar. It was at the close of the thirteenth century that the collar made its first appearance in Europe. Then it was not what would, strictly speaking, be called a collar to-day. The doublet had grown high in the neck and gowns were worn by men of the world. In the centuries which had passed before, men had found no use for collars of any kind. They believed in exposing as much of the body as was compatible with decency, deeming this necessary to acquire grace, strength and endurance.

Chaucer wore such a collar as that first introduced into Europe. It was merely the muffling of the neck in the folds of the gown, cloak or hooded hat. Ideas had changed and people wrapped up as much as they formerly went bare. But the collar had a hard fight for existence. The fifteenth century brought a decided change in the male attire. Tunics were cut low and worn short, scarcely reaching to the variegated hose worn by the swell of that age. Francis I. of France hid his defective neck in a high collar with just enough lace inside to take off the stiffness. This established the dress of the age and the low-cut tunic disappeared. The fashion was adopted by King Hal of England, who had observed it on the French ruler at their meeting on the Cloth of Gold. The ruffle gradually merged into the ruff, and on the ascension of King Hal's daughter, Elizabeth, to the throne she adopted the ruff as the style. And a strange article it became. It grew in width and in thickness and was not only starched, but stiffened with wires. So far out from the mouth did it extend that the wearers had to be fed by attendants with long spoons. Men, women and children wore them and they became fashionable throughout entire Europe. So rich were the lace and bullion of which they were made that only the wealthiest people could afford them. Elizabeth had adopted them to conceal her long, crane-like neck.

First appearance of the collar about 1540; Howard, Earl of Surrey.

The ascension of the Stuarts to the English throne brought in a peculiarly feminine attire for men. Lace was worn on the loose trousers, the shirt ruffled and the hair worn in long ringlets. This style of wearing the hair soon forced the abandonment of the ruff, and the lay down collar came into use. It rapidly grew in size until it became as large as a cape. The collar was made of the finest lace. Then came Cromwell. His followers wore short hair and the most simple dress, and the gorgeous lace collar had to go. The Puritans adopted a plain piece of turn-down linen called a band, and these collars are still to be seen in the dress of the school boys at Eton.

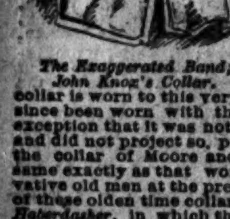

The Earl of Oxford's Collar.

With the restoration of Charles II. there came the restoration of the lace collar. It was not nearly so large and gorgeous, however, as the collar which characterized the reign of Charles I. The collars, which had heretofore been extremely stiff, gradually became limper, and toward the end of the seventeenth century disappeared altogether, scarfs of lace, lawn or linen displacing them. This was really the first cravat worn. The wigs of those days rendered a collar totally unnecessary, as they sat high above the head and hung to the waist. With the decrease of the wig came an increase of the cravat. The Hanovers inaugurated the custom of wearing ties of several folds of linen, edged with lace and tied in enormous bows in front. Gradually the collar began to assert itself again, and about the year 1800, when Tom Moore and Thomas Campbell were in the height of their fame a white standing-collar made its appearance. An effort was made by the Byronic school to supplant the "choker," as it was called, by a collar of less stiffness, but the attempt proved a failure, and with a few modifications the collar is worn to this very day. Neckties have since been worn with the collars. With the exception that it was not so heavily starched, and did not project so prominently forward, the collar of Moore and Campbell was the same exactly as that worn by many conservative old men at the present time. The cuts of these olden time collars are taken from the Haberdasher, in which there appeared an interesting article on the subject.

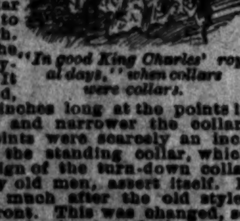

"In the days of ruffs" Sir William Russell's Idea.

The Exaggerated Band; John Knox's Collar.

Fashions in collars and cuffs are constantly changing, but there are no such marked alterations now as characterized its early existence. Some years ago young men wore an extremely high standing collar. Then the ends of it were turned very much as they are to-day. From a slight turn the ends were gradually lowered more and more, until finally they laid down flat in front like a turn-over collar, while the back of the collar was from two to three inches high. Then followed the turn-down or lay-down collar. It was narrow behind, but two or three inches long at the points in front. Narrower and narrower the collars grew until the points were scarcely an inch long. Again did the standing collar, which had during the reign of the turn-down collar been worn only by old men, assert itself. It came back very much after the old style, slightly open in front. This was changed, so that the ends met in front and the collar extended all the way around like the collar worn by the Roman Catholic clergy, only instead of having its ends meet behind they met in front. Then the points of the collar were rounded. Next came the turned corners as they are worn to-day. At first the turn in front extended further back. Then they were reduced until collars made their appearance with the least bit of a bend on the corners. The straight all-around high-standing collar again came in vogue, and is still in style, but did not displace the turned corners which are as fashionable as ever. The extremely small turn is not seen any more, however. Some of the collars which stand up all around have an opening in front of nearly two inches, and a collar just placed on the market has this opening and instead of the edges being turned flat down they have a natural roll. Another new style standing collar has a V shaped opening in front. One of the most striking styles of to-day is what is known as the "Purgatory" collar. It has a roll all round, the top edge being bent over. This collar has not taken very well in this city, principally because it will not stand much laundrying. Another of the new fads in collars is what might be called a two-story structure. It stands up all around, but is made of two different strips. The bottom portion, or strip, extends all way around and buttons in front, while the upper story has an opening in front of almost two inches. Whether this collar will be a go remains to be seen. There are at least fifty different styles collars which are considered fashionable just now. Each house has its own brands, and while, with a few exceptions, the collars are all of the same general order, each make has some peculiarity of its own. One firm has got out a collar intended to cover the whole face. It has openings for the ears, nose, mouth and eyes, and folds in a most peculiar manner. As yet, these collar have been confined to the show windows, although a photographer in the city is known to have purchased one for his gallery. No doubt they will be worked on the stage, but the most ambitious dude would scarcely have daring enough to wear one of them on the street. All the American styles in collars come from England. There are a few leading manufacturers there who make the fashions for the world in collars, cuffs and ties, the manufacturers of other countries adopting their styles with perhaps some slight changes and modifications. Although the English do not equal us in laundrying their goods, their collars, as a rule, contain better material and are more substantially made.

The Byronic Collar.

Reappearance of the Collar; Thomas Campbell's Neckwear.

Shortly after the standing collar became the universal fashion again a few years ago, the leading dudes of St. Louis and other cities immediately set about wearing extremely high collars. Some of them in thier zeal to excel in the height of their "chokers," sent East to have collars made especially for them which would be higher than anything that could be purchased in the furnishing goods stores. All the local dudes are still noted for the height of their collars.

AMONG THE BROKERS.

A Dull Market—Stocks Sold and Prices Obtained To-Day.

Mining stocks, although generally steady in price, were very inactive, scarcely any being in demand on 'Change.

* * *

San Pedro manifested more life than any other stock. It recovered slightly from the depression of yesterday's curb, opening at 15 bid. At this figure more than 2,000 shares changed hands, after which the price dropped, the stock being offered at 15, 13¾ bid. Neath was in good demand, 20 being freely bid and 1,000 shares were sold at that price. The stockholders are greatly encouraged at the condition of affairs, as the subscriptions are being paid rapidly. The directors have advanced sufficient money to meet the pressing debts, and to-day the papers releasing the judgment under which the mine was to be sold were received. Within ten days Mr. Scudder will visit the mine, probably accompanied by President J. C. Moore, when definite plans for the future will be determined on. It is likely that some important changes in the mill will be made and the shaft sunk 100 feet deeper in search of ore of higher grade than that at present at the mine.

* * *

A gentleman who arrived in the city this morning from Leadville states that the Small Hopes is looking better than it has done for some months, turning out a large amount of ore, and not only paying expenses, but also supplying ample funds for carrying on exploration work. The exploration shaft north of the Emmett is being sunk as rapidly as possible, with excellent indications of the presence of a good ore body at no great distance. The diamond drill has been practically abandoned, because as an explorer it failed to give satisfaction, having lately passed a rich pocket of ore without giving any indication of its presence. The stock was 95 bid.

* * *

Silver Age was offered at 45, 42½ bid. George S. Robertson, formerly Superintendent of the mine, is in the city, and says that the success of the property is now placed beyond doubt.

* * *

Golden Era was 11 bid, 12½ asked; 100 West Granite brought 17½; Conception was 18¾ bid, offered at 20, Black Oak was offered at 27½; Pat Murphy was 32½ bid, 35 asked; 500 Frisco sold at 35; Rena was 8 bid, 9 asked; 7 was bid for Jumbo, offered at 8; Dinero was 15 asked; 12½ bid; 5 was offered for I.X.L., 6½ asked; Gold King was 36¼ bid.

* * *

The Superintendent of the Horsfal reported "work progressing in the 150-foot level on good ore. We have one block on the west side of shaft eighty feet long and fifty feet deep, between the 100 and the 150 foot level, which is opened on four sides, all of which show good ore, the milling ore is from twelve to eighteen inches wide, and averages $23 per ton. There is a streak of smelting ore six inches wide that averages $85 per ton. We are stoping out ore in the 150 foot level, and the streak widens as we raise on it. The shaft is timbered to a depth of 180 feet, and will soon be completed to the 200-foot level. On the east side of the shaft the 150-foot level is driven thirty feet, and exposes a streak of milling ore of an average width of twenty-eight inches that yields $18 per ton free gold, and a streak of smelting ore that runs $67 per ton."

* * *

Messrs. E. C. Simmons, Al Bevis, George F. Meyer, W. C. Steigers and William Grayson will leave the city to-night over the Missouri Pacific for the West. They will visit Denver, Leadville and other points in the West for the purpose of looking after properties there in which they are interested. The party will be gone ten or twelve days.

The Quincy Disaster.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

QUINCY, Ill., October 12.—So far there have been no deaths reported from the injuries sustained by people at the fireworks amphitheater wreck, but Mrs. Thomas Winfrey of this city, Dr. Bourman of Rock Island and Mrs. Buffington of Des Moines and others are in a very precarious condition. Quite a number of the injured have been removed from the city to their homes on stretchers. There are still many at the hospitals and hotels. The great majority of the intelligent people of Quincy lay the cause of the amphitheater disaster to the criminal carelessness of W. E. Haworth, the builder, and the opinion is that steps should be taken to place the responsibility where it belongs.

CAUGHT AT THE CARS.

Officer Connolly Makes a Good Capture of a Texas Murderer.

Farney Hobbs, alias Charles Lee, was arrested yesterday at Carondelet by Officer Connolly, who had been told that the fellow was a fugitive from justice and was wanted in Dallas, Tex., for murder. The officer claims the prisoner admitted to him that he had killed a man named Edward Wensel in Dallas, and that he was to have been tried last Monday but forfeited his bond. Robert Purdy and Dick Flannegan were his securities. The following telegram was found in a room on South Broadway, which Hobbs had been occupying, by Officer Connolly:

Charley Lee, 2855 South Broadway, St. Louis: Skip. They are after you. DELLA STALEY. Dallas, Tex., October 10, 1888.

He was seen in the hold-over at the Four Courts to-day and denied that he had admitted having killed Edward Wensel. He said he was only wanted in Dallas for an aggravated assault on Wensel. The latter was alive and well. He had merely hit him on the head with a small cane. They had a quarrel which grew out of a fight between Della Staley and another woman. Wensel came at him with a knife and piece of billiard cue. Nothing was done by him, however. Next day Wensel came to his house and he went out to him and drew a revolver on him. He did not shoot, however, but hit Wensel over the head with a cane. They were friends again and the case did not amount to anything. He was willing to return without papers.

Officer Connolly displayed good judgment in the arrest. He followed the man to Carondelet, when he learned that he had left the South Broadway place. Hobbs was arrested just as he was taking the train for Fort Smith, to which place his baggage was already shipped.

MONEY.

NEW YORK, October 12, 11 a. m.—The stock market was quiet and about steady at the opening this morning, first prices being either unchanged, or but slight fractions different from last evening's closing figures. The market was dull throughout the hour, and the transactions were utterly devoid of feature in the general list, while the fluctuations were confined to the smallest fractions and possessed no apparent significance. New England and Cotton Oil were the only active stocks, and the former ranged over but ⅛ of 1 per cent. There was no movement in prices except in Cotton Oil which rose ⅜ per cent, and St. Paul & Duluth, which was very weak on slight transactions, losing 1½ per cent. The dullness became extreme toward the end of the hour, and at 11 o'clock the market was dull and steady at about opening prices.

Noon—Money easy at 2@2½ per cent. Bar silver 94. The stock market showed no change after 11 o'clock from its dull and listless state, and while there was still a little animation in New England, Cotton Oil and St. Paul, no movement whatever was noticeable in the list and no feature of any kind. At noon the market was intensely dull and steady at about opening figures.

3 p. m.—The stock market closed dull and steady at about opening figures.

St. Louis Markets.

FORENOON SESSION, CLOSING 1 P. M.

Receipts of wheat were large to-day and exceeded last year's for same time by 17,600 bu, and the stock decreased 7,000 bu, with 30,267 bu taken from store. Corn receipts were small and 11,000 bu less than last year for same time, but the stock increased 5,400 bu.—St. Louis seems to be trying just now to sustain her reputation as the great bear market of America. Advances in all the other speculative centers are responded to very slowly here, both in wheat and corn. This morning December wheat was up to $1.18⅜ in Chicago and did not go over $1.14⅛ here, as the selling by such bears as Francis, Fraley and others held the home market down. Slack speculation helped these bearish operators, as the buying was small. So long, too, as St. Louis shows such little action by comparison with other markets so long may speculation be expected to continue light. Speculation will seek a market where it will find some action for its money, and the operations of traders here who are short wheat in hammering values on every soft spot and sitting on the market on every hard spot is driving orders to Chicago. It is the same with corn, which is so far below Chicago in price that shipments are actually being made from St. Louis to Chicago. This being the case it is not surprising that St. Louis is unable to draw corn from the country, and that it is all now going to Chicago. Some of the local traders who pose as friends of St. Louis seem to be only so when it suits their own interests and bank accounts.—The Tacoma Ledger says that the production of wheat in the country tributary to Puget Sound alone is so large that an authority there calculates the capacity of that section at 200,000,000 bu per annum, all of which will be obliged to pay tribute in the way of transportation charges to the Northern Pacific Railroad. On September 29 last there were five ships at Tacoma and nine at Portland loading wheat alone. The production of wheat in the eastern part of Washington Territory has been so great that there is not warehouse facilities for its storage at Tacoma. Oregon wheat has been offered freely to arrive at Duluth in December at a price which caused spring wheat to decline.—Private cables. To Ewald: "London inactive and scarcely any buyers." To Green: "Wheat holders very firm, little trading; Corn firm." From Clarke: "Liverpool firm at full prices; trade and millers buying moderately; California advanced 1d." To Cleary: "London—Wheat market steady; 3d dearer asked. Liverpool wheat market quiet and unchanged since Tuesday. Liverpool wheat closes firm and in sellers' favor."—Life is but a fleeting show for man's delusion given, copper the crowd and play old Hutch—you're sure to make a winnin'.—[An ice-cold tip from C. Percey Higgins.—Grouse and quail will be in season in this market next Monday.—The export of wheat from India since the commencement of the crop year—April 1—to October 6 has amounted to 22,280,000 bu, against 21,500,000 bu for the corresponding time of last year. Advices from Calcutta September 26 report the wheat crop exhausted. The stock of wheat at Bombay is much smaller than usual.—The London Miller says: The official returns of imports of wheat into France for the month of August have just been issued, and show that 3,062,000 cwt of wheat and flour were received, against 1,712,000 cwt in August, 1887, and 1,604,000 cwt in August, 1886. The French share of the total quantity of wheat on passage to the continent is 510,000 qrs, or about 75 per cent of the whole. In Germany the wheat crop has been secured in better condition than seemed likely a month ago. The southern Kingdoms have a better yield than the north, so that the total wheat crop of the new German Empire is not now thought to be more than 5 per cent under an average. Heavy import duties have failed to raise the price of wheat to a 40s level, the present average being 39s per quarter and the markets proving difficult to maintain at that price.—Chicago is said to be shipping lard to New York on basis of 9c in her own market.—Buckwheat is a very important crop in France, the average production being 28,000,000 bushels yearly. The yield this year is said to be absolutely exceptionable, and double that of a good year. It is so abundant that it has been sold at about $1.13 per 100 lbs for October delivery. The exports of Hungarian flour to France are assuming extraordinary dimensions. Setting aside the forward delivery transactions, the shipments from Fiume this year, from January 1 to August 31, exceed considerably those of last season:

To	1888. Cwts.	1887. Cwts.
Rouen	142,500	89,090
Bordeaux	13,420	9,030
Other French ports	400	600
Total	156,320	98,710

The exports for the above period of this year are equivalent to about 900,000 bbls flour, or nearly 4,000,000 bu wheat.

Wheat did not go ballooning this morning as yesterday's "curb" led many to think it would. Chicago sold largely higher on its opening burst, but St. Louis did not enthuse and though selling 1c higher did not show any particular strength. The buying was light and timid, as very few orders were here, and the offers to sell were so numerous and energetic as to scare off local bulls. Some traders appeared to have made up their minds that St. Louis would not advance and led by Francis and Fraley there was enough selling to hold the market in check. December sold up to $1.14¼ and May to $1.16¾, but immediately let down and, favored by relapses at other points, declined to $1.11⅜ for December and $1.13⅞ for May. Later on came a rise in the other markets and cables came in strong and higher. This stirred up enough bull feeling and buying to run December back to $1.12¾ and May to $1.14¼, but it did not last and there was a fall back to $1.11⅞ for December and $1.13⅞ for May, closing at these rates and 1⅛c below yesterday. There was very little done in spot grades, millers buying sample lots to supply their wants chiefly. The prices asked for grades checked business. No. 2 red offered on call at $1.08⅞, but worth $1.09 at close; No. 3 red, $1.04½ in C., $1.04 bid for St. L. and M., $1.04½ for V., U. and A.; No. 4, 94c in A. and this side, 95c bid for E. and V.; rejected, 82c bid for E. and V.

Corn was easier and was crowded down a fraction in price, as there was very little buying and that of a stand-off description. There wasn't much for sale, but a decline in Chicago made these few sellers anxious and they met the lower prices bid them. October held its own, selling at 39¼c, and there were no sellers of November below 37½c, but year went off to 34⅝@34c and later was offered at 34¼c, and May sold at 35⅝@35¼c. Spot grades were firm, but the demand was slacker, with only order buyers in the market. No. 2, 38½c in C., 39¾c in U., 39¾c bid for St. L. and E. side; No. 3, 38½c in C., 38¾c bid for St. L., 39c for E. side, 39⅜c for U.; No. 4, 36½c in C.; No. 2 white, 41c bid this side; No. 3 do, 40c bid this side, 40¼c for St. L.

Oats—The speculative market was about dead, as there were few who would either buy or sell. A few trades were made in May at 29c. There was only a light order demand for spot grades, but full prices were paid. No. 2, 23c asked for St. L. and U. and bid for D., 23½c for C.; No. 3, 21c in St. L., 21½c in U., 21c bid E. side; No. 3 white, 24c in U.; No grade, 20½c in U., 19½c asked for C., 19c bid for St. L., M. and C., 20½c for A.

Rye was dull and weak. Grade No. 2 sold in St. L. at 54c; that was bid for C. and 54½c for U.; No. 3 offered in St. L. at 49c, and that bid for C. and U.; 50c for M. November was offered as low as 55c.

Barley slow sale, but held firmly. Quotations range: Wisconsin ordinary, 55@65c; choice, 65@80c; fancy, 80@90c; Iowa, 50@70c; Nebraska, 50@72½c; Minnesota, 50@65c; Canada, 95c for No. 2; $1.01 for No. 1.

Flour was held firmly and sellers would not abate one jot in their demands, as offerings were small, but the demand was light, with few orders here and business small. We quote: XXX, $3.70@3.80; family, $3.90@4.10; choice, $4.35@4.50; fancy, $5.10@5.20; extra do, $5.50@5.60; patents, $5.90@6.10. These prices for lots at depot and on levee this side.

Bran quiet. Sacked sold at 67½c East track, and 68c f. o. b. this side; bulk 58@60c at country points.

Hay—Market unchanged. The best grades of both prairie and timothy selling well, while all grades below choice were over plenty, dull and easy. Sales ranged this side: Prairie, $6@7 for red to prime; choice and fancy, $8@9; mixed timothy, $8@11 for common to choice; timothy, $11@14.50 for prime to fancy. Not enough doing on E. side to make a market.

Provisions were slow and with no material change in value. Only a job and order business was transacted. Sellers offered to arrive c. and f. to East side, winter dry salt c'ribs at 8¾c and standard mess pork at $15.37½, but sold none. Loose dry salt of shipping age, f. o. b. on cash orders: Shoulders, 8½c; longs and c'ribs, 9c; shorts, 9.40c; shoulders, 8¾c; longs and c'ribs, 9⅞@9⅜c; shorts, 9¾@10c. Packed bacon shoulders, 8¾c; longs and c'ribs, 10@10⅛c; shorts, 10½@10⅝c; loose shorts, 10½c. New standard mess, f. o. b., at $15.50. Prime steam lard, 9⅜c; fancy leaf, 11½c; second brand, 11c; hams, 11⅞@13⅞c; breakfast bacon, 11⅛@12⅛c. Beef—Family, $6.50@10 ⅌ bbl on orders higher; [illegible] half-bbl; dried, 10@13c; selected, 14c ⅌ lb; smoked tongues, $5.50@6 ⅌ doz. Tallow—Summer in oil bbls., 5c; irregular pkgs, ½c less; No. 2, 4¼@4½c. Grease, brown and yellow, 3⅛@4c; white, 4½@5½c. Salt—Domestic, $1 ⅌ bbl on E.; $1 on this side. Ground alum, $1.10@1.35 ⅌ sack, small way higher.

Highwines unchanged at $1.14 in St. Louis, Cincinnati and Peoria, $1.20 in Chicago.

Lead was lower and easy, advices from New York of a break to $4.65 unsettling and depressing the market. One hundred tons corroding were offered at $4.62½ for October, but there were no buyers in the market.

Afternoon Curb.

Wheat December, $1.12; puts, $1.08⅝ and calls, $1.14½. Chicago—December, $1.16½, and May, 1.14½.

Chicago Letter.

Private Wire to the Redmond Cleary Commission Co.

CHICAGO, October 12.—Wheat has been irregular, but withal the market has a strong undertone. Cash wheat has a fair demand for domestic milling, and it commands a premium over December for selections. From present indications our stock of contract wheat will be very small by the end of November. English and Continental markets are better and hardening. The May option is fully 1 cent under December and on its merits that is decidedly the cheaper. We regard the general wheat situation here and abroad as exceptionally strong, and as the actual situation is realized we look for higher prices.

Corn was dull. The decline was principally due to large selling by a prominent long. The closing was tame.

Provisions were only fairly active. Pork opened strong, but declined on a light demand. The prices reached were attractive to buyers and on general good buying the market made a sharp rally and closed firm. The tone is strong. We advise buying January pork and ribs on all breaks for a fair profit.

Cotton.

The Liverpool market was quiet and unchanged for spots; opened steady for futures, firmed up somewhat, but closed barely steady.

New York spots declined 1-16c and were quiet. Futures opened steady, went off a few points and steadied up later. The local market was easy for buyers, and there were increased sales, comprising about 2,500 bales.

CATTLE—The receipts were insignificantly small—less than twenty car loads—and consisted almost wholly of native cows and heifers. There was a fair demand for decent to good butcher steers of 800 to 1,100 lbs from home buyers, interior shippers and the Dressed Beef Co., but these buyers could not operate to any extent, which proved a disappointment to them. There was no great or urgent demand, however, and, had receipts proved large, not much activity would have been witnessed. The leading Eastern stock centers are well filled with range cattle, and prices are not improving to any extent, and as long as this state of affairs continues, no decided improvement for the better can be expected at this point. Why the receipts were so small here to-day can not be explained, but the fact remains, nevertheless. The pens were cleared early in the forenoon at strong prices, and this is all that can be said. Stockers dull and neglected. Veal calves scarce and wanted at $4.00@7.50 per head. Milk cows, with calves, dull.

Choice shippers, $5.00@5.50; good native shippers, $4.25@4.75; fair to medium steers, $2.50@3; common steers, $2@2.50; stockers and feeders, nominal; corn-fed Texas steers, $3.50@4; grass Texas steers, $2.25@3.50; cows and heifers, $1.50@3.30; bulls, $1.40@2; veal calves, $3.50@7.00 per head; fresh milk cows and calves, $13.50@30 per head.

HOGS—The different classes of buyers put in an appearance early in the morning and were willing to operate, but local speculators swooped down on the market and took everything straight at an advance of a nickel over the prices prevailing yesterday. To them the bulk of the sales were made, they paying from $5.75@6.05 per 100 pounds for fair mixed to choice heavy hogs. Shippers, packers and butchers got but comparatively few bunches. Offerings small and quality quite fair. Yorkers and Baltimores $5.80@5.90; fair to good heavy packing, $5.85@6; butchers and select heavy, $5.90@6.05; light mixed and pigs, $5.25@5.50.

CRAZY AND JEALOUS.

A Doctor Murderously Assaulted for Eating Dinner at a Patient's House.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

VALOSTA, Ga., October 12.—Wednesday a man named Vickers came to town after a doctor to see his sick child and got Dr. J. B. Manson to go the next day. When Dr. Manson reached the man's house Vickers was away from home. After attending to the child Dr. Manson was invited to dinner by Mrs. Vickers. The meal over the doctor was preparing to leave, when he met Vickers at the door. Dr. Manson remarked to Vickers that he was ahead of him and had had his dinner. It seems that Vickers is intensely jealous, and the fact that another man had eaten at his table while he was away seemed to put him into a frenzy. He attacked Dr. Manson with a knife made of a piece of scythe blade. Vickers went at his work with a relish, and it is a wonder that his victim, who is a small man, was not killed. After beating him Vickers went into the house and washed himself and then returned to his victim, beating him with a batting stick. In the meantime Vickers' wife and three men, who live on the place, had run away. A neighbor named Webb heard of the trouble and went to Dr. Manson's rescue. When he reached the place Vickers was gone. Webb brought Dr. Manson to town and he was given attention. He had an arm broken, was cut in the back and side and received a violent blow on the temple, laying bare the skull. He was otherwise beaten and bruised, and the attending physicians pronounce him in a critical condition.

Vickers is known to be crazy and jealous. This is not the first time he has turned himself loose. Had he searched the State over he could not have found a more harmless gentleman than Dr. Manson. He was never known to have had trouble with any man. So highly esteemed is he, that some men say that Vickers is not crazy enough to escape lynching in case Dr. Manson should die. Vickers has been arrested and an effort will be made by his friends to send him to Milledgeville.

COULDN'T AGREE.

No Verdict by the Jury in the Sensational Sherwood Case.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

BUFFALO, N. Y., October 12.—The jury in the sensational suit of Homer P. Sherwood against Henry S. Dunning of Syracuse yesterday failed to agree after being out thirty-six hours. Mr. Sherwood sued Mr. Dunning, who is his brother-in-law, for $10,000 damages for alienating the affections of his wife, who is about 40, good looking and fashionably dressed. The defendant's wife and her younger sister stand by him and believe that he is innocent of the charge made against him. Letters to Mr. Sherwood from his wife, while she was holding a Government clerkship at Washington, were read, but besides calling the defendant "Dear Henry," there was nothing very bad about them. Sherwood, at one time, had considerable property, but was unfortunate in various ways, became clerk in a shoe store and was deserted by his wife. Prior to that he had benefitted by a legacy left Mrs. Sherwood by her father. He used her money in various business transactions.

Mr. Sherwood claims that Mr. Dunning, who is a dashing drummer, had eloped with his wife, and produced Syracuse hotel clerks to prove this. A woman testified that Mrs. Sherwood retired with a man who resembled Mr. Dunning, and said there was no harm in it. She said that a female detective named Shoop had offered her $5,000 not to testify to this, but Mr. Dunning swore that she lied. The defense claimed that a man named Warner, who looked like Dunning, had taken Mrs. Sherwood to the theater and other places.

OYSTER OPENING.

Fat Carmody of Tony Faust's the Winner.

Central Turner Hall presented a lively scene last night when the two boss oyster openers of St. Louis were pitted against each other on a bet of $50 on who should open 1,000 oysters the quickest. Early in the evening the friends of each party began to crowd the hall, and at 9:05 o'clock, when the contest commenced, there was standing room only. The orchestra discoursed sweet music to the slipping of the shells and excited friends of each opener bet freely on their champions, but there is an end to everything and it was soon found that Carmody held the cards. Tony Faust is sure to have the right man in the right place and so the official account shows, as read by the referee, Mr. Smith, at the end of the contest; time 1h., 26m.: Carmody opened 1,053, of which 783 were whole ones; Hughes, 911, of which 490 were whole ones.

THE PEABODY STATUE.

Mr. Garrett's Illness Delays Its Presentation to the City of Baltimore.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

BALTIMORE, Md., October 12.—The directors of the Peabody Institute have had several consultations of late regarding the presentation to the city of the statue of the late George Peabody, which has been at the institute since last winter. The statue was ordered by Robert Garrett, and he intended to present it to the city to be placed in Mount Vernon place, just opposite the main entrance to the institute. Since Mr. Garrett's sickness, however, nothing further has been done and no one knows when the presentation will take place. Unless Mr. Garrett entirely recovers it is probable that the statue will be informally presented and quietly put in place without ceremony of any kind. The statue is an exact copy in bronze of the famous Peabody statue in front of the Royal Exchange, the work being done by Storey, the well-known American sculptor. The copy was made in Munich under Storey's supervision by order of Robert Garrett and was sent to this country immediately upon completion.

BAD EFFECTS OF "ROAD-SCULLING" ON THE HANDS OF OARSMEN.

Teemer Is Made Unfit by His Work in the Contest at Madison Square—How the Business Is Done—Ball Games Which Were Won by a Single Run—Sporting Matters.

MANY of the oarsmen who have worked in the road sculling race at Madison Square Garden, New York, have suffered considerably from the hardships necessary for the task. In describing this the New York Times of Wednesday says: When Referee Plummer called the oarsmen to the starting point at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, two of them, John Teemer and William O'Connor, were missing. He gave the word to the other ten roadscullers, and they began their second day's work in good form. Teemer and O'Connor were feeling despondent. Both had done brilliant work late Monday night, pulling down the big lead of Gaudaur, and had retired confident that they would show him their broad backs within the next nine hours. Their bright prospects vanished like a dream when they awoke at the Ashland House yesterday morning. Teemer's hands were covered with blisters as large as copper pennies, and the dry and inflamed skin was cracked at all the joints. It was a physical impossibility for him to close his hands. He also complained of soreness across his abdomen. O'Connor's palms were not in such painful condition, but he was crippled elsewhere and moved about with an effort. Referee Plummer, who is a veteran athlete and trainer, doctored up his patients as best he could and sent them back to their hotel with the assurance that they might resume work in the evening. Teemer said he did not care so much about the result of this race; he wanted to be in good form for a water match which he is trying to arrange with Kemp, the Australian, for the championship and $5,000. O'Connor laughed when he heard this remark, saying: "John, before you go against Kemp you better have a try with me. I am ready to make a match with you or Hanlan, and you know it." Teemer walked away without replying.

One thousand spectators were in the Garden during the afternoon watching the race with evident enjoyment. The oarsmen on the track were rolling up big scores at the rate of from twelve to thirteen miles an hour. The atmosphere in the big building was so suggestive of Manitoba that several of the athletes wore their "sweaters" and members of the Thirteenth Regiment Band, when not engaged in playing operatic selections and patriotic airs, danced around the promenade to keep their blood in circulation. Profiting by the disasters experienced by Teemer and O'Connor, McKay, Lee, Bubear and Hamm covered their hands with thick gloves and strapped soft cushions to the hard sliding seats of the machines. Gaudaur, Conley, Ross, Plaisted and East took no such precautions.

While the enforced retirement of the second and third man was generally regretted, and the management of the exhibition feared that it would rob the race of considerable public interest, the road scullers bent to their work with an energy and determination that did not warrant the gloomy view. Plaisted, Ross, McKay and Bubear were encouraged by the absence of the two formidable competitors to renewed exertions. Gaudaur seemed to be well satisfied with his strong lead and good luck in winning the check for $250 for the largest score Monday, and he seemed bent on making a play for another daily prize. The racing was exceedingly good in consequence throughout the afternoon prior to the dinner hours, between 5:30 and 7:30.

A restaurater at the west end of the promenade, preparatory to business, started a charcoal furnace fire in a portable furnace and left it. The furnace emitted clouds of suffocating smoke, which floated across the track towards the exits. Largan and Plaisted happened to plunge into the noxious vapor and they imbibed more than either could comfortably stand. They complained to the referee, who promptly abated the nuisance. Plaisted was not compelled to leave the track, but Largan was made too sick to sit up for a quarter of an hour. He recovered later on and got into motion again but was not himself all day.

The greatest speed attained by the scullers during the opening hour was credited to Ross and McKay, the former making 13 miles and 1 lap and the latter 13 miles. East, the rosy-faced youth who came from England to compete in the race, having had some experience with the tricycle on the other side, began the second day hopefully but met with so many mishaps during the first two hours that he left the track in disgust, with a total score of 44 miles and 5 laps.

Games Lost by a Single Run.

The Cincinnatis have lost no less than seventeen games this year by a single run. They began it in April, when St. Louis took a game 3 to 2. Three defeats in May were suffered with that narrow margin for the victors to stand on—secure, though, as a score, when you can't reach it. Kansas City took the first 4 to 3, St. Louis the second 8 to 7, and Brooklyn the third 4 to 3—that thirteen-inning battle on Decoration Day. They escaped without a scratch in June, for that was the month they had not only their eye but a few front teeth knocked out. Cleveland got a game in July 2 to 1, and two of five "one run reverses" in August were carried away by that same team. Cleveland's scores were 9 to 8 and 1 to 0. Brooklyn also nabbed a couple 6 to 5 and 1 to 0, while Baltimore got the odd game 4 to 3. In September the record was passed. The Reds were sat down upon six times with the victors a run ahead. Brooklyn got one 5 to 4, the Athletics one 3 to 2, Kansas City one 3 to 2 and Cleveland no less than three, one by the score of 3 to 2 and the others 2 to 1. This shows that six of Cleveland's seven victories over Cincinnati were won by a single tally. A little bit of sacrificing would have turned the tide in at least one-half these games, but the notorious absence of team work is responsible for Cincinnati's low position in the race this year.—[Sporting Life.

Grand-Stand Chat.

Louisville has realized $8,000 from the sale of releases of players this season.

Boston has made more money this season than any club in the country. Chicago and New York come next.

Brooklyn is after Billy Sowders' brother, who is now with St. Paul. He is a left-hander and is said to be a "hummer."

John I. Rogers has been retained as counsel for the Baltimore Club in the suit brought by "Phenomenal" Smith to recover salary amounting to $750.

Anson thinks Gumbert is doing well. In New York the young man's name was on the score cards as "Gumbust," and the crowd kept yelling "Gumboil" at him.

Four out of the five League umpires are members of Elks' lodges. Valentine belongs to the Indianapolis Lodge, Powers to the New Castle, Pa., Kelly to the Cincinnati and Daniels to the Hartford Lodge.

"One ball," shouted Umpire Kelly, the other day. "What?" said Galvin. "One ball," repeated Kelly. "How do you know?" inquired the stubby pitcher. "Because I am the umpire," replied Kelly. That settled it, and the game went on.

Tyng's three-years contract with the Philadelphia Club is for the position of Director of Athletic Sports, for which he gets $1,000 per year. His ball-playing contract called for $3,000 per year. Tyng is now negotiating with the Irish athletic team for a hurling match on the Philadelphia ball grounds.

"He is seriously injured," said a physician who was bending over the prostrate form of a ball-player, "and must be taken home at once." "Nonsense!" replied a kingly looking personage who stood by. "He can go on with the game." "Are you a medical practitioner?" humbly asked the doctor. "Naw, sir. I'm the umpire."—[Exchange.

John Ward says: "Much of the success of the Detroit team has been due to the untiring zeal of their Captain, 'Ned' Hanlon. Others have generally managed to appropriate the credit, but to him it has really belonged. The Detroits are a lot a great players, but without a spirit like Hanlon's to stir them up and keep them at work they would never have won the proud title of world's champions."

The majority of opinions thus far expressed on the method of increased batting by persons with a practical knowledge of the game is that the pitcher should be moved back at least five feet. All the players who have been interviewed on the subject are in favor of setting the pitcher back, but they do not all agree upon other points, the style of delivery, etc. —[Philadelphia Times.

As Detroit has proven such a poor city for a National League club and high prices and Cleveland not making any money in the American Association, we would suggest that a strong and paying International Association, having no long jumps, could be made as follows: Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Hamilton, Toronto and London. The International as now formed cannot and never has paid, but with such strong clubs as the above cities would put on the diamond the contest for the pennant would probably be close and exciting, consequently creating a greater interest in America's national game.—[London Speaker.

The manager that gets ahead of President Byrne of the Brooklyn Club must get up pretty early in the morning. The other evening Mr. Byrne walked into a New York newspaper office, and among other things he said: "As far as I can see the Athletic and Baltimore Clubs have played nineteen games together, and still have two to play. Will you kindly figure out how they can play twenty-one championship games instead of twenty, as the schedule calls for? I have telegraphed Secretary Wykoff about it, and expect his answer to-night. There is a mistake somewhere and when it is found out will, no doubt, serve to help us in our fight for second place. The trouble probably lays in the fact that the clubs have played a postponed game twice."

The Champion Browns, the proud winners of the title "The Four Time Winners," will be here on Friday and will close the championship season in a series of four games. It will be a proud moment for President Von der Ahe, for all prophecies have gone for naught, and his team, under the magnificent leadership of Capt. Comiskey, has fought its way pluckily to the front. They will receive a hearty welcome here and will leave Sunday night for New York, where the first of the world's championship series will be played on Tuesday. President Von der Ahe and the "champs" are going East in style, and a party of friends will accompany them.—[Cincinnati Times-Star.

The fact that the Boston managers made so large a demand for a slice of the profits before they would allow a world's championship game to be played on their grounds has caused somewhat of a change in the order of things. It would not do for the two clubs to lie idle next Wednesday, the day on which they were to have played in Boston, and it is quite likely that they will not be able to play in Brooklyn, because President Byrne has already arranged for Indianapolis to play there on that day. It is, therefore, more than likely that the game which was to have been played in Boston will be played at the Polo grounds. President Day said yesterday: "It will probably be arranged so as to play four games in this city and four in St. Louis, so that with the Philadelphia and Brooklyn games there will be ten in all. If we find that it will be necessary to play the eleventh game we can go to Cincinnati. I do not think that any of the games will be played in Pittsburg, for they did not draw there last year, and I don't think that they will now." —[New York Sun.

CAUNCE, THE DEFAULTER.

Had a High Old Time With His Employers' Money.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, October 12.—It seems that James P. Caunce, the defaulting book-keeper of the Dolphin Manufacturing Co. of Paterson, N. J., and New York, had a "high old time" generally while he was getting rid of the firm's money. Mr. Caunce is assisting in the work of investigation, but no further discrepancies seem to have been discovered, and his employers' loss may be limited to the $8,000 already known to be missing. Caunce has been carrying on his peculations for years. Since Wednesday it has been stated that Caunce was infatuated with a young Frenchwoman residing in New York, and it is supposed that he spent the stolen money upon her. It also appears that when Supt. John Cheyne went to Europe in June last he left Caunce in charge of the mills and gave him the keys of his private residence at the corner of Ward and Prince streets, asking him to look after it during his absence. Caunce seems to have made the residence a nightly meeting place for himself and two male companions, and it is also said that women were introduced in the building. The disclosures concerning Caunce have completely prostrated his wife, who has been an invalid for years, and it is feared she may not survive the shock.

Maj. Reno's Attempted Suicide.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Pa., October 12.—Maj. Marcus Reno attempted to commit suicide here Wednesday night. He placed a revolver in his mouth and was about to pull the trigger when a friend grasped the weapon and prevented him from doing violence to himself. The cause of Maj. Reno's rashness is attributed to domestic troubles. It is believed that he was crazed by drink when he attempted to kill himself. A few days ago an order of the court was granted directing him to pay $50 a month for his wife's support, and he has since told his friends that his income is hardly that much. He now threatens to kill his wife and himself and he is being closely watched.

THE CHILDREN'S CONCERT

A GRAND CHORUS OF 1,500 VOICES LED BY GILMORE'S BAND.

An Event in the Musical History of St. Louis Which Will Not Soon Be Forgotten—The Programme for the Evening—Scotch Airs and Ballads to Be Played To-Morrow Night.

ON this evening the children's chorus concert will take place and the huge stage will be filled with the children of the various Sunday-schools. A chorus of about fifteen hundred voices will sing, accompanied by Gilmore's Band. The singing of the children is exceedingly beautiful for they are well trained and their young voices are full of sweetness and melody. It is a pretty sight, too, that enormous mass of gaily clad children, combining every imaginable color, and the band in its bright military uniform. The picture is as pretty as one would care to see, and the music is charming. There was a concert this afternoon and the second and principal one will take place to-night. The chorus will be under the direction of Prof. Lindsay, and Gilmore will lead the band. There are few events that bear as much interest as this, for the children are members of innumerable Sunday-schools, and as the members of the churches to which they belong and all the parents of those 1,500 little ones are very much interested, there is sure to be a large attendance, and those who do not arrive early will have a chance to stand up.

To-morrow evening will be Scotch night, and the airs and melodies that are so fragrant with the odor of heather will be played to the delectation of the lassies and laddies. Gilmore has arranged from his repertoire an excellent programme of Scotch ballads and familiar songs, and there will be a full attendance of Scotchmen on that occasion.

* * *

The attendance at the Exposition is exceedingly large, and the nightly crowding of the building signifies the wonderful power the big show has of maintaining its interest. It is really phenomenal that the people continue to visit the show night after night and never grow tired of looking at its beauties and hearing the beautiful music. Its only explanation lies in the fact that the Exposition is the grandest and most varied show that has ever been offered to the people of the West. No city in this country has ever produced an exposition of such great merit as this, with such a variety of exhibits to interest its visitors and such excellence in every respect. Gilmore is exceedingly popular, and he certainly knows what music to give the people, for they flock to the hall in thousands. The success of the Exposition is marvelous, and it would be well for the people of other cities who contemplate getting up anything of the kind to study this one and pattern after it if they wish it to succeed.

The Entertainment Hall, where Munkacsy's "Christ on Calvary" is exhibited, is thronged daily with visitors and the great painting is the subject of much praise and adulation. The lectures, which are delivered by the local clergymen and by Mr. Graham on the different characters in the painting are exceedingly interesting, and they aid one greatly in understanding the artist and comprehending the meaning of the painting. Those who have not seen the picture should not fail to visit it, for it will soon be taken away and placed in a private gallery, and no one should miss seeing it, for it is one of the greatest paintings of the world and it ranks with masterpieces of the old world.

* * *

The programme for the children's concert to-night is as follows:

7:30 O'CLOCK.

1. Overture—"Semiramide" ... Rossini
Gilmore's Band.
2. Song—"Wake the Song."
Grand Chorus.
3. Song—"Awake! Awake!"

5. Episode Militaire—"The Charge of the Light Brigade" ... Puerner

6. Song—"What a Gathering."
Grand Chorus.
7. Solo and Chorus—"Galilee."
Miss Birdie Black and Grand Chorus.
8. Hymn—"America."
Grand Chorus.
The audience is requested to arise and join in this hymn.
9. Song—"The Banner Song."
Grand Chorus.
10. Song—"God be with you 'till we meet again."
Grand Chorus.

Gilmore's Band in choice selections, 9 to 10.

Notes.

Don't forget the charity concerts on Sunday.

The children's concert will be an entertainment that no one should miss.

There are several attractions on the list for next week and the closing nights of the Exposition will be memorable.

Gilmore promises some exceptionally good music for next week and when he makes a promise it means something.

Scholten's display of photographs attracts more attention than any other exhibit in the building. It is a marvel of beauty and a great credit to the artistic skill of Mr. Scholten. No one should miss seeing it.

Mr. G. W. Platt of Chicago, the artist who painted "Vanishing Glories," is in the city and last night he visited the Exposition and saw his picture under an artificial light for the first time. Any number of people who discovered that he was the artist asked him to settle the dispute which has been going on by telling whether the picture is painted on canvas or wood, but he gracefully declined.
